Proposal to Divide Business Three Ways Reported.

Ruling Due Today On Bid Restrictions

Action to Increase Competition Is Expected.

By Frank Getty.

Some of the "dynamite" in the War Department truck procurement situation hidden heretofore in grand jury proceedings and secret executive sessions was touched off yesterday by the House Military Affairs sub-committee.

An alleged proposition by a General Motors Corporation official that manufacturers "get together" and divide up Government business to their mutual profit was described to the committee by one witness.

A definite connection between General Motors and Frank E. Speicher, missing witness in the recent grand jury investigation, also was revealed at yesterday's hearing.

Sabotage, in which sand was put in the crank-cases of 12 Chrysler trucks at Fort Riley, Kans., also was disclosed.

The committee later announced that Comptroller General McCarl is expected to rule today on the situation whereby the Chevrolet Motor Co., a subsidiary of General Motors, is the only competitor eligible to furnish the War Department with trucks to be purchased with a PWA allocation.

More Competition Seen.

After a conference with Assistant Secretary of War Woodring at the latter's office yesterday afternoon, the House committee indicated it was highly probable that certain restrictions would be waived, immediately if temporarily, so that other companies would be able to compete for contracts before the end of the current fiscal year next Saturday.

A "loosening up" of restrictions on competitive bidding, which now bar manufacturers whose subsidiaries have Washington lobbyists, was agreed to by Woodring and approved by the two committee members present, Representatives Kvale (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, and Goss (Republican), New Hampshire.

Goss said the Comptroller General has been asked to rule promptly whether the restrictions can be waived on bids already in.

Navy Will Join Alaskan Flight

To Use 12 Planes; Army Plan, First Announced, Calls for Only 10.

Somebody in the Army or the Navy evidently has discovered gold in Alaska. The rush is on, and the participants are in a hurry. They are going to use airplanes.

Last Thursday the Army Air Corps announced plans for a ten-plane flight from Washington to Fairbanks, Alaska. The take-off is set for early in July.

Yesterday the Navy, not to be outdone, stated that they would fly 12 planes from San Diego to Dutch Harbor, Alaska, starting "about July 17."

The Navy maneuver will comprise a coastwise flight of two patrol squadrons of the Aircraft Base Force. A total distance of approximately 7,500 miles will be covered, virtually the same as the flight of the Army pilots.

The U. S. S. Wright and three aircraft tenders, the U. S. S. Sandpiper, U. S. S. Swan and the U. S. S. Avocet, will serve as advance bases for fueling, engine overhaul and supply operations. The Wright is flagship of Rear Admiral Alfred Johnson, U. S. N., commander of aircraft of the Base Force.

The flight will be commanded by Lieut. Comdr. J. M. Shoremaker, U. S. N. Two squadrons of six Martin patrol planes will be used.

From San Diego the planes will fly to San Francisco, Astoria, Seattle, Ketchikan, Juneau, Cordova, Kodiak and Dutch Harbor. The return trip will be made by way of Sitka, Prince Rupert, Vancouver and Portland, arriving at San Diego about September 3.

Haldeman-Julius Suit Is Settled Out of Court

Pittsburg, Kans., June 26 (AP).—Marital and financial differences between Mrs. Marcet Haldeman-Julius and her publisher husband, E. Haldeman-Julius, have been adjusted and a separate maintenance and recovery of money suit brought by Mrs. Haldeman-Julius was dismissed today by District Judge L. M. Resler on motion of the plaintiff.

Haldeman-Julius is the owner of a publishing house at Girard, Kans., and became widely known a few years ago as a supporter of companionate marriage.

Tunneys' Second Son Born; Papa Talkative

Mrs. Gene Tunney, wife of the former heavyweight boxing champion, yesterday gave birth to a second son. Both mother and baby were reported "doing well."

New York, June 26 (AP).—"Papa" Gene Tunney, at times a very silent man, stretched in a chair, threw out his chest and talked about his second son, born to his wife, the former Polly Lauder, today at the New York Medical Center.

"I guess I'll be back in the ring now as a referee, with two little fellows ready to square off," said the one-time heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

Tunney bounded out of the chair with a smile and strode up and down the hotel room, his faded red dressing gown, the same one he wore during his ring days, draped over him.

"That first boy needed a sparring

British Vote To Hold Reich Cash for Debt

Parliament Passes Plan to Seize Money in Moratorium Row.

London, June 26 (U.P.).—Parliament tonight authorized seizure of German cash to protect British interests during the six-month moratorium which the Reich has proclaimed on foreign debts, beginning Sunday. The move came in the House of Commons with passage of the clearing house bill. It was approved without division.

The bill has yet to be approved by the House of Peers, but that was considered a formality and passage in Commons tonight was considered final.

It was hoped, however, that it will not be necessary to use the powers. A German delegation, arriving tonight, is to seek a compromise which will avert this move and halt a threatened disastrous trade war which neither can well afford.

Suspect in Girl's Death Enters Not Guilty Plea

San Francisco, June 26 (AP).—Millard Hickman, 43-year-old marine engineer, was arraigned in superior court today on a charge of murdering Miss Louise Jeppesen, of Ogden, Utah, pleaded not guilty, and heard July 9 fixed as the date of his trial.

Hickman was arrested early in May after the body of the attractive Miss Jeppesen was found ravished and beaten in Golden Gate Park. Investigation showed she had attended a gay party in the Hickman apartment the previous evening.

Hitler Storm Troopers May Be Disbanded

Month's Vacation Believed First Move in Nazi Policy Change.

Berlin, June 26 (AP).—Persistent rumors that Chancellor Hitler's brown-shirted army of storm troopers will be reduced radically or disbanded altogether were given a significant background today by orders to store uniforms during July.

Karl Ernst, in charge of the troopers in Berlin and the Province of Brandenburg, told his men that during their month's vacation, previously announced for July, they must wear civilian clothes except when specifically ordered to appear in uniform.

The reason given for the order is that Ernst desires to restore all storm troopers to their families. Wives and children have complained, he pointed out, that the men are too busy with the Brown army to spend much time at home.

Glider Champion Seeks To Break Own Record

Elmira, N. Y., June 26 (U.P.).—Dissatisfied with his feat of breaking the world's record for sustained glider flight by almost 20 miles, Richard C. du Pont planned to take off in his motorless plane again today in an effort to establish a record that would stand for a long time.

Du Pont soared 155 miles over Allegheny Mountain ridges from Elmira to Somerset Hills, N. J., airport, yesterday, bettering the record of 136 miles set in Germany in 1931 by Guenther Groehoff.

805 Street Lamps to Be Dark Sunday Due to Low Finances

Eight hundred and five single lamp street lights will be dark Sunday and hundreds of other lights will have their illuminating power considerably lessened as District officials begin meeting the $68,700 slash in lighting appropriations dealt the city by Congress.

Plans announced yesterday by the District Commissioners provide for the disconnection of single lamps at scattered points throughout the entire city. The Mount Pleasant area and the downtown section are principally affected by decision to operate 372 double lamp lights on a single lamp basis.

Single lamps numbering 281 will be cut off Sunday as follows: Thirty-two on H street from Third street northwest to Fifteenth street northeast; 5 on D street from Sixth street to Pennsylvania avenue; 10 on New York avenue from Ninth to Fourteenth streets; 3 on Eighth street from Pennsylvania avenue to F street; 7 on Tenth street from Pennsylvania to New York avenues; 47 on Seventh street from Water street to Florida avenue; 7 on Wisconsin avenue, M street to Volta place; 3 on F street from Fifth to Seventh streets; 1 on Thirteenth street between New York avenue and I street; 6 on Twelfth street from Pennsylvania to New York avenues.

Ships Crash, Scores Are Feared Lost

Collision Sinks Boat Within View of French Port.

Bodies of Six Found; Six Others Are Badly Hurt.

Lorient, France, June 26 (AP).—Nearly 100 persons, including many women, were believed to have drowned tonight in a collision between two small passenger boats in full view of this port.

Only 12 of 100 passengers aboard the steamer Prosperite were accounted for after the boat sank as a result of a collision with the steamer Marie Ange.

Six of these 12 were dead and six others were in the Marine Hospital here seriously injured.

The passengers were workers in the Lorient Arsenal, and were on their way to their homes in various coastal towns.

Scores Trapped in Cabins.

The collision occurred just as the Prosperite pulled away. A number of persons were seen to jump into the water, and some were picked up by harbor boats, but port officials said at midnight—six hours after the wreck—that scores had apparently been trapped in the cabins or carried off to sea.

Since some might have been taken to other places uninjured, officials believed they would be unable to determine the exact number of dead until they have checked the families of all the passengers.

The Marie Ange was not damaged in the collision.

The Prosperite, however, had a huge hole ripped in her stern through which the water poured. She sank within a few minutes of the crash, barely giving a majority of the passengers time to jump clear of the wreckage.

Hundreds See Tragedy.

The tragedy was unfolded in full view of hundreds of persons who crammed the docks, unable to offer assistance.

Small harbor craft were the first to bring succor to the drowning. They fished a dozen persons from the water and got those who were alive to the Marine Hospital, where they were given first aid by doctors and nurses.

Admiral Deville, commander of the naval port, took charge of the rescue work. Boats equipped with searchlights searched the black waters for hours after the crash, while relatives all night long awaited news from the rescue workers.

Sewell Injured; To Be Out a Week

Nat Catcher Hit on Head by Pitched Ball.

Luke Sewell, the National's first-string catcher, who was knocked unconscious and carried from the field in yesterday's St. Louis-Washington game when hit on the head by Pitcher Irving Hadley while at bat, is not seriously injured, it was announced last night.

Immediately after the accident he was rushed to Garfield Hospital, where an X-ray photograph was taken, and it showed no skull fracture. Sewell must remain in bed for a day or two, however, and then will be discharged and told to avoid strenuous work for two or three more days. He probably will be lost to the Nats for a week.

Sewell was hit on the left side of his head, the ball badly bruising his ear.

This is the catcher's second accident of the season, as he injured a finger in New Orleans on a foul from Joe Vosmik's bat two weeks before the season started, and did not get back in the line-up until June 13.

Frank Grube, St. Louis catcher, also was injured in yesterday's game, the fourth finger on his right hand being dislocated, and possibly broken.

Doomed Mother Of 3 Still Hopes

Confident of Clemency as Death Hour Nears.

Ossining, N. Y., June 26 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Antonio, 28-year-old mother of three children, paced restlessly in her narrow cell in Sing Sing prison death house tonight, still confident executive clemency would save her from the electric chair. She is scheduled to die Thursday night.

If the State executes the death penalty pronounced on Mrs. Antonio for allegedly conspiring to slay her husband, she will be the first woman to die in the electric chair since 1928, when Ruth Snyder was executed with Judd Gray, also for the killing of her husband.

Scheduled to enter the execution chamber the same night as Mrs. Antonio are Sam Farraci and Vincent Saetta, accused with her in the death of Sam Antonio, allegedly to obtain his insurance.

Congregational Moderator Elected.

Oberlin, Ohio, June 26 (U.P.).—Dr. Jay Thomas Stocking, St. Louis, today was elected moderator of the Congregational Christian Churches at the denomination's assembly here. The Rev. Stanley Merrell, Durham, N. C., was named assistant moderator.

U. S. Relief Cost Passes Two Billion

Hostility Among States Grows Over Huge Allotments.

By Robert C. Albright.

Destitution from Maine to California in two years has run up a Federal relief bill in excess of $2,150,000,000, while another thinning purse of $1,165,000,000 stands ready to meet uncertain months ahead.

This is money authorized by Congress to feed the starving and drought-stricken. Indirect aid through the PWA, the CCC and the TVA would double the total Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins is spending at the rate of $130,000,000 a month to relieve actual distress.

Through direct grants to States, through made-work projects, through farm surpluses purchased and distributed to the poor, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration is fast affording the chief outlet for emergency Government millions thrown against the depression. And FERA money flows only one way.

State Fights Loom.

Zealously fighting for their share, the States, some of which are entirely dependent on Federal relief, already are eyeing balefully the larger allotments doled out to their neighbors, and a fire of partisan, sectional and social implications is smouldering.

Maryland, for example, is not altogether satisfied with the $10,975,533 it has received in direct grants from FERA. It can not understand why its taxpayers must shoulder the new $525,000,000 Western drought aid burden, when it had a drought of its own in 1930 the Federal Government did nothing about.

Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland, sums it up something like this:

"I do not want to oppose or appear to be opposed to taking care of human suffering and misery, but to be frank, I am getting a little weary of my people having to bear the load every time anyone wants to come here to Washington, and take millions out of the Treasury and give it to them."

4,300,000 Families Aided.

To which Senator Alva Adams, of Colorado, retorts:

"The purpose of this is to take care of those people, because we are going to need them to help the balance of the country, when they get back on their feet. They are going to help pay for this then."

Meantime, with conditions aggravated by drought demands, the FERA estimated about 4,300,000 families are on the relief rolls, and, in addition, some 600,000 single persons. And payments average $25 a family.

The load dropped to 3,000,000 families last year, but Adminstrator

2 Frostburg, Md., Bankers Arrested

Embezzling, Misapplication of $100,000 Charged.

Baltimore, June 26 (Spl.).—Federal officials here announced today that Roberdeau Annan, president of the First National Bank of Frostburg, Md., and Frank M. States, cashier of the institution, have been arrested on charges of embezzling and misapplication of $100,000 of the bank's funds.

The alleged operations of the two men were said to extend back to 1928.

Each man was accused of embezzling and misapplying $50,000 of the bank's funds. Assistant United States District Attorney G. Randolph Aiken said the Federal officers entered the case when William C. Walsh, attorney for Thomas B. Finan, receiver for the bank, called them last Saturday.

Trammell Leading In Florida Primary

Jacksonville, Fla., June 26 (AP). Senator Park Trammell took the early lead as returns were tabulated from today's second primary to decide the junior Senatorial nomination from Florida. With 21 of the State's 1,288 precincts counted, Trammell has 568 votes to 379 for Claude Pepper, his youthful opponent.

Murray Tax Pardons Held Void by Court

Oklahoma City, June 26 (AP).—Pardons issued by Gov. William H. Murray canceling penalities on delinquent ad valorem taxes were held void by the State Supreme Court today.

Gov. Murray granted numerous "pardons" to State taxpayers, remitting penalties, after Attorney General King had held that only the Legislature had authority to cancel them.

World Wheat Parley Postponed.

London, June 26.—A meeting of the international wheat advisory committee set for tomorrow has been postponed because delegates have been unable to find a basis for agreement, it was learned today.

Roosevelt to Give U. S. Accounting Tomorrow; Vetoes 14 Minor Bills

South and New Deal

Observer Finds Disposition in Dixie to Accept Federal Cash as Manna From Heaven Without Giving Much Thought to Tax Reckoning.

(Malcolm H. Bryan, associate professor of economics at the University of Georgia, is a recognized authority on the social and industrial problems of the far South. The Post prints below the first of a series of five articles, prepared by Prof. Bryan at our request, in which the far-reaching effect of the New Deal on the economic structure of the Southern States is given impartial examination.)

By Malcolm H. Bryan

There have been manifold phases of the New Deal in the South, of course, as everywhere else. But probably it is fair to say that Federal policy appears mainly directed to the accomplishment of four fundemental objectives with respect to the South:

1. The material increase in Southern wage rates by means of the NRA, FERA, and PWA;

2. The decided narrowing of wage-rate differentials between the North and the South, under the command and inducement of the same agencies;

3. The substantial expansion of Southern relief scales through the FERA;

4. The improvement of agriculture's relative economic status by AAA disbursements and by price enhancements, resultant from a directed reduction in the volume of agricultural production.

Now, first of all, it should be candidly admitted that the effects of this policy have thus far appeared almost entirely beneficent.

The South has been genuinely stirred. Those who have been employed have been receiving higher wages than before. The unemployed, the unemployable, the people actually disemployed by Federal activity—most of these have had refuge under the protecting wings of the FERA, the PWA and the CWA. They have attained to rates of relief beyond their fondest imagining, and to rates of pay, pitiful enough in Utopia perchance, but higher than the prevailing rates for private industry in the area, and utterly fabulous in the experience of most of the astonished recipients.

To be sure, the outpouring of Federal money in this first year of the New Deal has led to better days the country over. It seems equally true, though, that the South attained the first, and, relatively,

14 Are Named To Check All U. S. Finances

Morgenthau "Brain Trust" Will Survey Currency, Taxes and Revenue.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday announced appointment of a "brain trust" of 14 members to make sweeping surveys into all aspects of currency, banking, taxation and revenue.

The 14 members of the Morgenthau "brain trust" will be divided into two groups, one to study the currency and credit situation in the United States and the other to examine and report on the Federal tax system. The purpose of the two surveys is to furnish Secretary Morgenthau with data on which to base recommendations for legislation by Congress next year.

A third group, already connected with the Government, will go to England next month to make an intensive study of the British income tax system. The object of this group will be to ascertain how the British exchequer prevents tax avoidance and ways the American income tax structure can be improved.

And Other "Trusters."

Meanwhile the Justice Department added a "Brain Truster" to its rolls yesterday when Dr. Justin

The fugitives are E. A. Heygood, 19, Clay City, Ind.; Kenneth E. Griffin, 17, Banning, Calif.; C. E. Haywood, 19, Dayton, Ohio, and James C. Harrison, 29, Lima, Ohio, all facing Dyer act charges, and Harry H. Clark, about 40, Wichita, charged with looting a mail bag at Herington, Kans.

NRA Refuses To Give Mill Back Its Eagle

NRA demands for reemployment of some of the workers dismissed for participating in a strike must be met before a Blue Eagle will be restored to the Harriman Hosiery Mills, Recovery Administrator Johnson announced yesterday.

At the same time indications were that Attorney General Cummings would make known shortly whether the Department of Justice would institute any action in the case.

Meanwhile, the mill, located in Harriman, Tenn., remained closed. More than 600 persons were thrown out of work when the plant shut down Monday after collapse of negotiations with NRA officials.

Johnson, at a press conference, answered charges by mill officials that they had been "persecuted."

Cites Peace Efforts.

"I never did have any doubt that the mill had violated the code," he explained. "I have less doubt now than ever before.

"I have done everything I know how to compose this dispute. Five emissaries have been sent down there."

After outlining terms of a plan for return of the emblem, rejected by the mill immediately before it ceased operations, Johnson commented:

"Those things certainly show violation of the spirit and letter of the code."

Paul Whiteman's Mother Dies.

Denver, June 26 (AP).—Mrs. Elfrida M. Whiteman, 68, mother of Paul Whiteman, orchestra leader, died today in Presbyterian Hospital, after a long illness. Paul Whiteman was reported to have left New York for Denver today. A daughter, Mrs. H. Paul Smith, of St. Louis, arrived just before her mother died.

President's Mother Wins British On Visit to King and Queen

London, June 26 (AP).—Youthful in spirit as any debutante who ever walked up the palace halls to a royal court, but ripe with the experience of her 80 years, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt had an animated visit with the King and Queen of Great Britain today.

The mother of the President of the United States, visiting in England, went to Buckingham Palace for tea.

The hours flitted past so quickly she almost stayed for dinner. She might have done just that, but Mrs. Roosevelt had to return to the American Embassy for a dinner in her honor.

As the aged mother of the President left the private apartments of Buckingham Palace, to which few visitors penetrate, it was said in official quarters that seldom has a stranger made an impression so gracious and friendly on this staid capital.

The gentle old lady, who talked to the King and Queen about children and the President, was described "the most effective ambassador of good-will ever sent to Great Britain by the United States."

Mrs. Roosevelt didn't know she would hear from the King and Queen. But today their Majesties sent a friendly note to the American Embassy. They hoped the mother of the President would find time to come over to Buckingham Palace, and they suggested tea.

Seldom, it was said at the palace, has a visitor come with such charming informality. Mrs. Roosevelt met the King and Queen on common ground, and talked to them as if they were old friends.

The Queen and Mrs. Roosevelt, both mothers and grandmothers, did most of the chatting over the tea, King George sitting back and listening.

President's Air Talk to List Achievements Tell Plans.

Farm Moratorium Measure Held Up

Decision on It and New Appointments Due Shortly.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In his first across-the-table talk to citizens of the Nation in six months, President Roosevelt will go on the air over both radio networks at 9:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Announcement of plans for the speech was made at the White House yesterday morning shortly after the President returned from his week's vacation in the East.

He is expected to give a resume of accomplishments, elaborate on the National planning now uppermost in his thoughts, and release possibly a few Parthian shots at Administration critics.

The address was arranged just two days before the President's departure for the Pacific, now set for Saturday, in what was seen as an effort to bolster support for the New Deal in his five week's absence.

Plunges Into Work.

Back at his desk, the President began a series of conferences with Administration aids and broke precedent by vetoing 14 minor bills affirmatively instead of allowing them to die without approval.

He also signed the prison industries bill, presided at a joint meeting of the executive and emergency councils, and went over appointments to the half-dozen commissions he must name before Saturday.

Cabinet members attending the council meeting were told to go off for a rest themselves as the President, plunging into the mountain of work ahead of him, made ready to board the cruiser Houston at Annapolis at the end of the week.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings left an opinion on the Frazier farm moratorium bill, chief of the hundred or more measures still to be passed on by the President.

Divorce Is Lost By Tilly Losch

London, June 26 (U.P.).—One of the most sensational divorce suits in years ended today with the granting of a decree nisi to Edward F. W. James, prominent in society, from Tilly Losch, dancer.

A jury acquitted James of charges of cruelty brought in a counter action by the actress. The question of costs was postponed until tomorrow.

The jury of staid Englishmen found both Miss Losch and Prince Serge Obolensky, named in James suit, guilty of misconduct. Both denied the charges and during the testimony brought witnesses, including Lady Cavendish, the former Adele Astaire, also a dancer in their defense. Lady Cavendish, the judge, Sir Boyd Merriman, remarked in handing down the decision, lent color to the proceedings by thumbing her petite nose in court to demonstrate a point.

Under a decree nisi, the verdict is effective in six months, during which time both parties are on their good behaviour.

James, who owns an estate at West Dean, near Chichester, charged his dancing wife with misconduct with Prince Obolensky in New York and London. The couple were married in 1931. Miss Losch, an Austrian, was premiere danseuse in Morris Gest's "The Miracle." James' sister is Mrs. Marshall Field 3d, of Chicago.

The latest description of her condition was that she had considerably improved after a serious relapse more than a week ago and was in no immediate danger.

Money System Of U. S. to Face "Brain" Survey

Miller, dean of the law school of Duke University was named a special assistant to the Attorney General to assist the Solicitor General in the preparation and argument of cases in the Supreme Court.

Still another addition to the "Brain Trust" was on his way to Washington last night. He was Dr. Robert M. Carr, assistant professor of economics at St. Mary's College in Oakland, Calif. He will assist in the advising the President on tariff matters.

The recommendations and studies of the Morgethau "Brain Trust" may when completed, probably during the fall, represent major developments in the "New Deal" program. Morgenthau said he had placed no restrictions on the matters to be taken up by the two groups, which will work under direction of Dr. Jacob Viner, noted economist and a special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Proposals that a new central banking system be set up as a substitute for the Federal Reserve system, that all banks be nationalized and for a unified banking system are among the topics which the group directed to study banking and currency will consider.

Will Check Other Policies.

In addition, this group will survey the currency policies of the Government, including the operation of the gold devaluation act and whether silver should be given a more important place in the monetary structure. The group also wil concern itself with "the various types of credit institutions in the country, their inter-relationships and the existing methods of regulation and control thereof and the relation of credit and currency policy to business stability and maintenance of steadyemployment."

The group assigned to study revenue and taxation will consider the "need for administrative revision and simplification, the distribution of tax burdens, the relationship between the Federal and State and local revenue systems and the possibility of making use of revenue provisions as a business stabilizing device."

List of Appointees.

Those named to study taxation and revenue problems were:

Dr. Malcolm Bryan, associate professor of economics at the University of Georgia and author of several books regarding fiscal policies in Georgia.

Dr. Roy G. Blakey, professor of economics at the University of Minnesota; former teacher at Cornell University; former consultant to tax commission of North Carolina, and tax adviser to Governors of Minnesota and West Virginia and an expert with the Treasury during the World War.

Richard A. Lester, of Princeton University.

Louis Shere, officer of instruction in Columbia University extension department and author of a book on New York State taxes.

Dr. Carl Shoup, assistant professor of business administration at Columbia University and editor of the Bulletin of the National Tax Association.

Dr. Henry F. Walradt, professor of economics at Ohio State University, author of several works on taxation and winner of the sixth Simmons Economic Prize Essay Contest with "Who Ultimately Pays the Taxes?"

Dr. K. M. Williamson, professor of economics at Wesleyan College and author of articles on taxation in scientific journals.

Banking Probers Named.

The group named to study banking and currency problems were:

Virginius F. Coe, of the Brookings Institute, and lecturer ni economics at University of Toronto.

Lauchlin Currie, instructor of economics at Harvard University, professor of international economics at the Fletcher School of Law and author of the "Supply and Control of Money."

Dr. Albert G. Hart, instructor in economics at University of Chicago.

Edward C. Simmons, of the Brookings Institution and Ohio State University.

Dr. Harry D. White, professor of economics at Lawrence College, Appleton, Wis.

Paid on Day Basis.

These men will be paid on a per diem basis while working on their problems out of the emergency banking fund set up by Congress last year. Experts outside of the Treasury have been requested to submit briefs and memoranda on the subjects covered in the studies.

The group leaving for England to study the British income tax system include Dr. Roswell Magill, tax adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury, L. H. Parker, tax expert to the joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue and Eldon C. King, a tax expert in the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Secretary Morgenthau said the objective of these studies was "to open up the Treasury and take a look from the inside, to review all our policies and satisfy outselves whether the course we are following is to the best interest of all concerned and if not to say so."

"The lid is off and I have given these men carte blanche authority to approach these problems as they see fit," Morgenthau said. "These people have been recommended to me as being intellectually honest and that is all I have required. No restrictions have been placed on them.

"My attitude is that just because the Treasury always has been doing a certain thing in a certain way does not make it right. Ever since I came to the Treasury I have wanted to do this but we are just catching up with the situation and this is the first opportunity I have had."

South Grateful for Relief Cash With Little Worry About Future

the greatest economic boost when the cards were initially reshuffeled. For, with the departure from gold last spring, and the kickup in prices, agricultural commodities stepped a faster pace for awhile, as they had previously in fact declined more dismally. The cotton plowing contracts were the first fruits of the AAA. The textile industry blazed up remarkably and immediately. Add tens of millions for relief and the picture is complete in the rough.

Improvement General.

It would be a blunder, naturally, to assume that the South has suddenly become a bonanza section, or has attained any remote approach to the material opulence which regions north of the Potomac possessed in halcyon times, or has at its disposal, miraculously acquired, some equivalence to the resources of capital and wealth which those territories even now command. Still, starting from somewhere behind scratch, the improvement has been noticeable.

Another point of emphasis. It is not that the South has received so much. Other sections, the truth is, have had infinitely more of the Federal outlay in terms of absolute amounts. It is not that people in the South have been given food or work who did not need them both very desperately indeed; or that either wages or relief have been disbursed beyond the meagerest dictates of human sympathy for human suffering.

It is simply that wage rates under the force of Federal policy, public employment and private employment alike, as well as relief scales under the FERA: these have represented for the South not only a long stride away from the "natural' rates of pay under the free working of economic competition, but also an immense enhancement of previous contributions for the alleviation of distress. Relatively, then, the Federal program has meant for the South a much greater step upward than for any other part of the Union.

Criticism Unwelcome.

It is not—be it repeated therefore—that the South has gained so much. It is rather that it has moved forward a little, and even a moderate accession of activity, of wages and relief, measured from so small a previous base, makes a handsome statistical showing, especially when put in percentage terms. Truly, the South has, with a sort of tentative gesture, "warmed both hands before the fire of life."

On such satisfactory arrangements the breath of criticism must appear as welcome and benign as a severe frost in late spring. When business is better, and people are happier in the South; when the long estrangement with Washington seems ended; when the whisper runs below the Ohio that perhaps the Southland comes at last into its own, then only a churl would dare to introduce the element of uneasy contemplation.

Yet not all is quiet on the Southern front. In Birmingham the other week some overheated industrial gentlemen spoke brave words about secession. In the North, where the well-disposed used to say in bewildered 'phrases that the South, maybe, would lead us out of depression, there is a rumble of dissent. There is vague talk of vast Federal subsidies to the South. There is a mounting tide of resentment against an expenditure load which must finally rest, in disproportionate measure, upon the North.

Blow Hot and Cold.

There is also an increasing drift Southward of uneasy Federal men, to have a look at the situation, and to offer something of encouragement and more of admonition. In a jovial mood, they dangle lollypops, such as subsistence farming projects. More often, they tell us that the water is about to be cut off, that it is time for the South to drop something substantial on the tambourine. In the South at present we are analyzed and psychoanalyzed and usually disapproved of; alternately buttered on one side and resoundingly whacked on the other.

All this, of course is the premonition of the time when the gusher of Federal money sputters to an end, when, so far as the Federal Treasury is concerned, imbursement must follow hard on the heels of disbursement. Then many of the splendid farm rehabilitation programs, designed to transform the rural South into something nearer the heart's desire, must be slowed down or halted, for they can only be floated upon the flow of Federal capital. Then, one suspects, the Federal subsidies for the support of the South's newly expanded relief standards must likewise be halted or gradually and largely withdrawn. In short, a period is likely to arrive apace when the South receives a friendly pat on the back, is handed its increased wage rates, its narrowed wage differentials, its augmented relief schedules, and is told to run along and play with its own little red wagon.

Make Best of Present.

Without any necesary connotation of criticism, then, it can surely be said that Federal policy in regard to the South, and the whole set-up of present circumstances deserve the most thoughtful examination. Just as surely there has thus far been little of thoughtfulness.

What the narrowed wage differentials, the increased wages, the contracted agriculture, the new relief bases: what these mean for the competitive position of the South, the volume of employment, of relief cases, and the tax load has gone largely unconsidered. Social workers and welfare administrators, a class which might ordinarily be expected to assume a reflective posture, have been so busy with the FERA that they have had little time for mental processes and have been characterized chiefly by a vague, kinesthetic feeling of pleasure in being given the wherewithal to feed the hungry.

Real Problem to Come.

Southern conservatives have in general remained Southern conservatives, though they have latterly been putting fewer people to death by elocution. Southern liberals are still Southern liberals. For the most part they have accepted the New Deal program for the South with a sort of subreligious fervor, and they pretty well expressed themselves awhile back when one of the best of them had himself a look at the situation and concluded: "Swell! I'm damned tired of the South's being poor."

And yet, the problems remain. Southern wage-rates, wage differentials between the North and South relief, contracted agricultural activity: these are the subjects of steadily growing local and National significance which will be examined in four more sucessive articles in The Post.

whether the order means that the great bulk of the troopers never will be called back to duty.

One of the greatest stumbling blocks in the way of an arms agreement between France and Germany has been a French contention that the storm troopers constitute a quasi-military body and should be considered as effectives. Dissolution or reduction of the uniformed organization would greatly ease iHtler's position in foreign affairs.

On the other hand, it is known that Ernst Roehm, chief of staff of the stor mtroop organization, is greatly opposed to its dissolution.

Home of Gettle Is Being Guarded

Los Angeles, June 26 (AP).—Armed guards today watched over the Beverly Hills mansion of William F. Gettle, wealthy victim of a recent $60,000 ransom kidnaping which failed, as authorities sought the writer of two extortion notes which they said Gettle received last week.

Officers said the notes told Gettle his home would be dynamited in efforts to destroy him, his wife and four children unless he left $6,000 at a designated spot to compensate for his testimony against two women convicted in the kidnaping case.

A trap was laid but no one appeared.

Abducted last May 9, Gettle was held five days before officers found the kidnapers hideout and captured them.

Calif. Infantile Paralysis Victim List Is Growing

San Francisco, June 26 (AP).—Thirty-nine names were added today to the lists of persons stricken with infantile paralysis in the San Francisco and Los Angeles metropolitan areas.

San Francisco reported four new cases and there were nine more in the East Bay area. The Los Angeles compilation included thirteen cases reported Sunday and a like number yesterday.

These figures brought the total reported in San Francisco to 69, with six deaths; in Alameda County (East Bay district), to 113, and in Los Angeles City and County, to 718 since May 1. There have been eight deaths in the southern metropolitan area.

New cases in the State reported last week numbered 340, bringing the total to 1,223 since May 1.

Gas Valuation Hearings End After 16 Month

The long drawn out hearings on the valuation of the Washington and the Georgetown Gas Light Companies came to an end yesterday after the utility had inrtoduced its last rebuttal witness.

Extending for 16 months, the hearings cover more than 7,000 pages of printed testimony. Although hearings are ended, the case is far from complete. Counsel for both commission and the gas companies yesterday were given 60 days by Chairman Riley E. Elgen to file briefs.

After these are received the commission will come to a decision within a few weeks or months, and then its verdict probably will be appealed to the District Supreme Court and thus become tied up in litigation.

The hearings actually began in February, 1933, but soon adjourned, while engineers of the commission and the gas companies sought to work out an agreemetn on facts relative to the valuation. This, it was said, would greatly shorten the subsequent hearings.

Consequently, when the hearings were resumed in October, it was predicted that they would be concided by Thanksgiving, then by Christmas, then by spring.

The gas companies seek to justify a valuation of about $30,000,000, while the commission's staff has aimed at approximately $23,000,000.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, has conducted the case for the commission. Richmond A. Keech, former people's counsel, assisted until he was confirmed as a member of the commission. He has considered himself barred from the case, and Elgen has sat alone.

Theft of 28 Suits Brings Jail Term

Farrell admitted in Police Court yesterday that he had "no fixed address," so Judge John McMahon provided him with a two-year lease at the District Jail.

The cort was told he has been in Washington only a brief time, but had gathered together 28 suits of clothing and personal belongings of boarding house residents throughout the city.

Police said he would rent a room for the night and in the morning would be gone. Also missing would be property of other roomers.

Judge McMahon sentenced him to serve 360 days in jail on each two larceny counts.

Sylvan Theater Opera Tonight

"Bohemian Girl" Will Be Given by Wentworth Players.

Balfe's melodious three-act opera, "The Bohemian Girl," arranged for outdoor production, will be given this evening by the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group in the Sylvan Theater, under the auspices of the Community Center Department and the National Capital Parks Office.

The leading roles will be sung by Alma Harris, Mildred Sherman, J. Raymond Baine, Ira J. Meyer and Harry Yeide. This will be the last opportunity for Mr. aBine's friends to hear him for some time, as he will leave this week to fill vaudeville and radio engagements prior to making his New York appearance in a new light opera this summer.

This is the third event at the Sylvan Theater sponsored by the summer festival committee of Washington this month. The amplifying system recently has been improved.

Milkmen Fight Chiselers.

Chicopee, Mass. (U.P.)—The chiselers in the milk business have got to be stopped somehow, so the Chicopee Milk Dealers Association adopted this method: They loaded a truck with cases of milk, parked near an offending place, and sold milk at 4 cents a quart. They also had a banner on the machine, which read: "We'll beat the chiseler at his own game."

Silver Diplomas Planned.

Golden, Colo. (U.P.)—This year the Colorado School of Mines, at Golden, will distribute silver diplomas instead of the accustomed paper ones. They will be made of silver and will be rolled into thin sheets.

Federal Spending for Relief Passes $2,000,000,000-Mark

Hopkins thinks "there is very little likelihood" it will go that low this fall.

The Federal relief burden has mounted with increasing acceleration since Congress in 1932 authorized $300,000,000 in RFC grants to the States. It was May of the following year that the FERA was brought into being, with an additional $500,000,000 for State benefit grants.

Money Exhausted.

Then, as the program gained impetus, the Civil Works Administration was organized under the FERA, and the PWA advanced the new unit $400,000,000. Relief funds were exhausted the following February, and Hopkins came back for $950,000,000 for both CWA and FERA. He got it, bringing direct Federal relief authorizations to $2,150,000,000.

Last month he came back to Congress for $640,000,000 more. Along came the drought, and the President raised the request $525,000,000. By making available $500,000,000 in unobligated RFC balances, Congress has made it possible to satisfy both demands.

And under the Congressional authorization, Hopkins need not confine himself to the $840,000,000 he asked, for the act is so worded the President might allocate any portion of the additional $525,000,000 drought fund to the FERA.

On the face of the complicated budget picture, it appeared that $1,165,000,000 in new money will be available for relief before Congress returns, exclusive of additional funds allotted semirelief agencies.

CWA Being Disbanded.

The Civil Works Administration, so lively an issue last February, is being disbanded. Only 8,000 or 9,000 CWA employes are left altogether, and the wor khas been discontinued all over the country—except for the payment of bills.

An official breakdown of FERA grants to the States, complete through May 31, showed New York far out in front, with grants totaling $84,881,045. Of this, $37,219,741 went into the State on a one-third "matching" basis, and the rest on a basis of need.

Pennsylvania, a close second to New York, was succesful in getting $63,532,080 out of the reilef ag, while a middle Western State, Illinois, was third, with $46,952,616 in relief grants.

Sparsely populated Nevada in the far West was at the bottom of the list in point of benefits received, drawing only $742,319, while Wyoming fared almost as porly, receiving $844,767. Vermont was third from rock bottom, getting $1,010,606 in grants.

The District of Columbia drew $3,359,572, faring better than any one of nine States. Nearby Maryland's $10,975,533 placed it twenty-second on the list of States, while Virginia, with $5,22,850, was thirty-fourth.

Gotwals Picks Board to Plan Sewage Plant

Advisors Will Prepare Specifications for $8,000,000 Job.

A special sanitary board to prepare specifications and working plans for the construction of the $8,000,000 sewage disposal plant at Blue Plains was appointed yesterday by Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals.

Although the loan from the PWA has not been formally granted, the District Commissioners have received assurance that the money will be forthcoming, as soon as President Roosevelt signs the ill, which confers money borrowing power on the District.

Commissioner Gotwals will head the special board. Assisting him are Sanitary Engineer John B. Gordon, Lieut. Robert E. York, assistant engineer Commissioner, and A. D. Black, assistant sanitary engineer. All of these made the study of pollution in the Potomac River, which resulted in the recommendation for the sewage plant.

Consultants who aided in the early survey will also assist in the work of the special board. They are Harrison P. Eddy, of Boston; John H. Gregory, of Baltimore, and Samuel O. Greeley, of Chicago.

Commissioner Gotwals estimates that from six to eight months will be required to prepare the working plans, while three years will be required for construction work.

Plan to Split U. S. Business Is Reported

Discussed by Auto Men, Army Purchase Probers Told.

The alleged offer to "split the Government business three ways" was described to the committee by R. P. Sabine, president of the Northwest Motor Co., a Ford agency.

Sabine described a conference at Camp Holabird, Md., attended by himself, E. C. Simonds, Ford agent in Alexandria, Va., and Norman K. Haig, managing director of Government sales for the General Motors Fleet Corporation.

Says Nothing Was Done.

"Haig told us he had his bellyful of selling to the Government at cost," the witness testified.

"He asked why we couldn't get together—General Motrs, Ford and Chrysler—split the business three ways, and all make a profit," added Sabine.

"What was done about it?" asked Goss.

"Nothing," replied the witness.

A. H. Ferraneou of the Dodge Co., a Chrysler subsidiary, was called to the stand to say whether his company had accepted Haig's proposition. He said no such arrangement had been made.

Sabine volunteered the information that there had been "bad feeling between General Motors and Chrysler since the grand jury investigation."

The price-fixing proposition was made last January, Sabine testified.

Committee members announced Haig, now in Detroit, would be called to give his version of the affair.

Previous testimony by Haig before an executive session to the effect that Frank Speicher, a somewhat mysterious figure in the Government's lobbying inquiry, had no conection whatever with General Motors was read to Sabine yesterday.

Price Charts Submitted.

Sabine said Haig "must have misunderstood the questions," since Speicher had represented the Chevrolet Co. when bidders on trucks for the forestry department were called in for a conference on revised schedules. The witness swore positively that Speicher acted for Chevrolet on that occasion, and named Government officials who would testify similarly.

Speicher has been sought since early spring.

The Ford agent also submitted charts to support his contention that the Chevrolet and Chrysler companies had sharply increased their prices in idding on Government truck contracts since Ford was barred by the NRA.

"The figures show that on 4,000 units the extra cost to the Government was $161,000," Sabine said.

In bidding on Army sedans, he testified, the Chevrolet Co. raised its price per unit from $433.83 when Ford was competing, to $581.99 when the President's executive order had made the latter firm ineligible.

After Ford was disqualified, Sabine asserted, Chevrolet's bid on a certain type of Army ambulance rose from $673 to $1,015.

J. B. Woodside, on behalf of the General Motors Fleet Corporation, denied yesterday there had been any undue increase of this nature.

Bash Backs Woodside.

"Any statement to the effect that the Chevrolet Motor Co. have increased prices to take advantage of the situation is without foundation in fact and undoubtedly made to prejudice the minds of the committee against the General Motors Corporation," Woodside, former assistant to Comptroller General McCarl, wrote the committee.

Maj. Gen. L. H. Bash, quartermaster general of the Army, agreed Woodside's statement was "substantially correct." In previous testimony, he had admitted the price increases.

After finishing its open hearing, the committee adjourned to Woodring's office to confer on the procurement situation created by the latter's order barring from competition all firms which can not sign a certificate to the effect that neither they nor their subsidiaries employ Washington lobbyists.

With only a few days to go before the fiscal year ends, both Woodring and the committee sought to alleviate a situation where this restriction limited competition to one firm—the Chevrolet Motor Co.

Woodring had an opinion from the Judge Advocate General of the Army to the effect that the restriction could be removed temporarily.

The Ford Co., of course, is barred by the Executive order, but Chrysler, because its subsidiary, the Fargo Co., has a contract with a Washington lobbyist, also is eliminated under the existing ruling.

Decision Expected Soon.

"We expect to hear immediately from the Comptroller General that the competition can be widened," Representative Goss said last night.

"In addition to this matter, however, we discussed many broad phases of War Department procurement with Mr. Woodring. He has cooperated in every way, and Representative Kvale and myself wish to commend him in the highest terms."

Goss predicted that among the changes to be effected in the future will be for the War Department "before or in its invitation for bids to specify the needs for the motorized equipment—what kind of work it is going to have to do—so that the Comptroller General can decide whether the specifications have been too restricted or not."

This question arose in connection with the size of cylinders on light trucks, where a competitor whose bid was rejected because of inadequate displacement showed the smaller engine would have been adequate and more economical for the work required of the vehicle in question.

It was charged yesterday that an "act of sabotage" had been committed against 12 Chrysler trucks supplied the Civilian Conservation Corps in Kansas. Brig. Gen. A. G. Lott, commanding officer at Fort Riley, advised the committee that sand had been found in the crank cases of the engines.

All Sawing Wood on Coal Dealers' Outing

They're cutting a man's bed in half while he sleeps. Miss S. A. May, office secretary of the Coal Merchants Association, and R. S. Anyway it makes it unanimous, everyone is sawing wood. All this happened at the Coal Merchants' annual outing at Bay Ridge, Md., yesterday.

Johnson Refuses to Restore Eagle to Closed Hosiery Mill

no communication direct from the Department of Justice since the Harriman case was referred to that agency March 13 by the National Labor Board with a recommendation for 'appropriate action."

New Report Submitted.

Asked whether the Department of Justice intended to prosecute the mill, Johnson responded:

"That's a little bit embarrassing. I don't know what they are going to do. Ask them."

He displayed a letter from the Department of Justice to the labor board, written June 18, which reported information sent to the department by the Atlanta office of the labor board, which figured in the Harriman negotiations, was "not sufficient to warrant prosecution."

Maj. George L. Berry, NRA division administrator who has made several trips to Tennessee in connection with the case, interposed he had submitted a repor tto the Department of Justice since June 18.

Johnson was flanked by Berry and A. R. Glancy, another NRA division administrator, who returned yesterday from Harriman. Berry and Glancy told of their investigation.

Asked whether the mill officials appeared to be "bluffing' by closing the factory, Glancy said:

"They are sure of themselves."

Johnson interposed:

"I can say this. Without some amelioration of the situation the Blue Eagle will not be restored."

Observers recalled the Harriman case was an outgrowth of a strike last October after mill officials refused to bargain collectively with employes. The National Labor Board has charged numerous employes were dismissed for participating in the walkout.

Glancy said mill officials told him none of the employes hired since January 1 lived more than 25 miles away from Harriman. He said the management refused, however, to permit NRA to audit its pay roll to establish that fact.

Mill Rejected Plan.

The employes, including strikers who have not returned to work, Glancy said, agreed to a plan under which NRA would restore the Eagle. Glancy said the mill rejected the plan and took issue with clauses which would have required it to remove from the pay roll all persons living more than 25 miles from Harriman and to adjust the pay roll in order to spread work among persons on relief rolls by limiting new employes to one worker from a family.

It was those clauses, Glancy contended, which company officials made the basis for charges that NRA wanted the company to dismiss loyal workers.

Glancy said the full text of his proposal was as follows:

"1. The strike is hereby called off.

"2. All picketing ,acts of intimidation and coercion shall cease immediately.

"3. The company will not prosecute any case growing out of the strike, including contempt cases, occurring prior to this date and will dismiss all pending cases.

NRA Audit Provided.

"4. All strikers agree not to institute any suit against Harriman Hosiery Mills growing out of any occurrence of the strike.

"5. The company will dismiss the injunction on or before the next term of chancery court and pay all costs in connection with said dismissal.

"6. The National Recovery Administration will audit the last pay roll o fthe company in order to determine the number of employes actually employed during that period (this number not to exceed 623).

"7. Replacements to bring or keep this pay roll to 623 wil lbe made by the company in ratio of three strikers to one non-striker.

"8. All increases to the pay roll above 623 will be made from the strikers' list only.

"9. The company states that all new employes placed on the rolls since January 1, 1934, have come from the immediate vicinity of Harriman; it, therefore, agrees to take from its pay rolls any new persons who have come from a distance of 25 miles or more from the center of Harriman..

Relief Program.

"10. If new employes now on the pay roll constitute more than one wage earner for any family group, adjustments will be made between that family group and a family group of old employes now on State or Government relief.

"11. The company shall be governed by section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery act so long as same remains the law, which section is quoted as follows:

"The employes of the company shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint or coercion of the management, or its agents, in the designation of such representatives or i nself-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.

"No employes and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing.

Other Provisions.

"The company shall comply with the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, and other conditions of employment, approved or prescribed by the President."

"12. The company shall operate under the code of fair competition for the hosiery industry and such amendments thereto as may, from time to time, be adopted.

"13. Paragraphs 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 are only effective when the strike has officially been called off by the local union.

"14. Paragraphs 7 and 8 will be complied with when 50 strikers have been employed."

Glancy reported he rejected an offer of the mill to employ three strikers to every nonstriker hired in the next few months because statements by the management indicated few new workers were likely to be taken on for at least a year.

New Tunney Baby Is a Bouncing Boy partner and now we've got him," he laughed.

"No, it's not true that we're going to name the new baby Jack Dempsey Tunney, as has been rumored. Someone is just kidding us.

"There's no Jack Dempsey in our family and the baby will be given a family name. The first one was Gene Lauder Tunney. He's 2½ now.

"About naming him Dempsey, Jack will probably need that name for his own son. I understand the Dempseys are expecting a baby in the family and maybe it will be a boy."

Then the conversation swung back to the main subject. "Now as to this baby, we got a 25 per cent dividend on this little chap. The first baby weighed 7 pounds and 8 ounces and this one is 8 pounds and 11 ounces."

The hospital reported the baby and Mrs. Tunney, who is the daughter of the late George Lauder, jr., millionaire steel manufacturer, were in fine condition. She and Tunney were married in 1928.

Ickes warned that the oil eagles would be revoked immediately upon violation of the code. Dealers may apply for the placards at the State or regional committee of the Planning and Coordination committee.

Ottawa, Ont. (U.P.).—All members of the Doukhobor sect in Canada will be deprived of the franchise under a new election act drafted by the Federal Government. 14 Minor Bills Turned Down By President Measure to Aid District's Needy Blind Is Among Those Vetoed.

A new procedure in vetoing bills after Congress has adjourned was inaugurated by President Roosevelt yesterday when the White House announced he had made marginal notations of disapproval to 14 minor bills.

Among those vetoed was a measure to provide for needy blind persons in the District of Columbia. In annotation typical of the President's statements on the other measures, he commented on the District bill:

"I am compelled to agree with the adverse reports on this bill made by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and the Director of the Budget. I therefore reluctantly disapprove the bill."

Naval Measure.

Commenting on a bill to correct the naval records of former members of the crews of the revenue cutters Algonquin and Onondaga, he wrote:

"This bill is disapproved because it stretches the imagination to declare men on a revenue cutter for 37 days on the Great Lakes in August, 1898, to be entitled to all the privileges of Spanish War Veterans."

"In the past," a White House statement said, "it has been customary in most cases involving vetoes for the President to withhold his signature, thereby, in effect, allowing the bill to die without becoming law.

May Become Precedent.

"The President has desired, however, to take a more affirmative position than this, feeling that in the case of most legislation, reasons for definite disapproval should be given.

"Therefore, he has written on the copy of each bill the words 'Disapproved and Signature Withheld' and has appended in every case a brief statement giving the reason or reasons for disapproval."

This practice on the part of the President, which may well become a precedent for other Chief Executives, abolishes the negative "pocket veto" of measures enacted during the closing days of Congress.

Orlando Loses Point in Fight On Extradition

Pensylvania Official for Surrender of Suspect in Maryland Death.

The extradition from Pennsylvania to Maryland of Samuel J. Orlando, wanted for murder in connection with the Bladensburg Tea House shooting, was recommended yesterday by Lee Edward, deputy attorney general of Pennsylvania, according to the Associated Press.

Sheriff W. Curtis Hopkins of Prince Georges County also left yesterday for Harrisburg, Pa., to attend the extradition hearing. He took with him James Wallace who, with James Zalenski, is serving an 18-year term for the murder of Grover Amick at the tea house in 1931.

Wallace will attempt to identify Orlando as one of those who entered the tea house in the early morning hours and proceeded to "shoot up the place," killing Amick and wounding five other persons. The shooting was laid to rivalry between white slave gangs.

Orlando was arrested in Philadelphia at the request of Maryland authorities. If he is returned the State will have the custody of all those sought in the case. Joseph D'Alessandro, the other fugitive at large, was arrested by New York police and returned recently to the Upper Marlboro Jail.

Both men, along with the three colored men who are alleged to have terrorized the county recently, may be tried at the short term of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, now in session. The colored men are held by Washington police, awaiting extradition.

Roosevelt Will Report to Nation On Work in Air Talk Tomorrow

Neither he nor the White House, however, would confirm the expected veto of the bill, which would enable a six-year suspension on farm indebtedness.

Action Due Tomorrow.

Out of the conferences on pending appointments came only the word that no action is expected before tomorrow, when the seven-man commission to govern communications may be named. Eugene O. Sykes, present chairman of the Radio Commission, has been mentioned to head the new board.

Before the week is out the President also must choose five members to the new Stock Exchange Commission, a housing administrator, and substitutes for the existing National Labor Board and the Railway Mediation Board. Numerous vacancies also exist in other agencies.

Both James M. Landis, of the Federal Trade Commission, and Ferdinand Pecora, special counsel in the Senate's banking investigation, have been spoken of as possible choices for the Stock Exchange Commission, but of 50 or more names under consideration no hint of actual selections has yet been given.

Postmaster General James A. Farley conferred at length with the President at Hyde Park yesterday, accompanied him home by train and also was on hand at the White House much of the afternoon. Their discussions presumably have centered on the appointments.

The President's radio address tomorrow night will be his final speech on the mainland before he lands at Portland, Oreg., in August. In this connection, Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, announced that the President's speeches on his return from the West Coast will have no political significance.

The proximity of the President's scheduled addresses in the farm belt to the fall elections has led to suggestive speculation, which, according to the White House view, is unwarranted in light of his expressed determination to steer clear of the forthcoming campaigns.

Meanwhile, the President yesterday also found time to entertain the President-elect of Colombia, Dr. Alfonzo Lopez, at a luncheon—a courtesy which will be reciprocated when Mr. Roosevelt lands at Cartagena during his cruise. Port-au-Prince, Haiti, also has been added to his itinerary.

Green Reports Steady Decreas In Joblessness

Thousands Still Returning to Work in Summer Off-Season.

A note of encouragement rang out yesterday from the muddle of wage-earning controversies which span the Nation when President William Green of the American Federation of Labor announced that the ranks of the jobless still were dwindling during the off-season months of May and June.

"Men and women," the labor chieftain declared in the federation's monthly statement on employment conditions, "are still going back to work, although employment gains are not so rapid now as they were in the early spring."

He estimated fro mreports from trade unions throughout the country that there now are 10,267,000 jobless. This he said was an increase over the low level reached last September, when only 10,108,000 workers were reported searching for jobs.

Employment Still Gaining.

"Our unemployment estimate for the country as a whole," Mr. Green continued, "shows that nearly 300,000 went back to work in May, and trade union reports for the first part of June show employment still gaining. Gradually workers are regaining the winter employment losses."

He declared that there was a gain in employment in building, estimating 150,000 went back to work in April and May. However, he called attention to figures showing that there were still 1,400,000 without work in the building trades.

Small gains in May were general throughout industry, he said, adding that in factories, approximately 10,000 returned to jobs. Farms absorbed 42,000; mines approximately 40,000; wholesale and retail trade, 26,000, highways approximately 30,000, and railroads 45,000.

Continuing, Mr. Green said:

"For the 10,267,000 still without work in industry, the Government is increasing its emergency work program. More than 115,000 were added to PWA pay rolls in May, and the number on the work program of the relief administration has risen from 550,000 at the beginning of April to more than 900,000 at the end of May and 976,000 in mid-June. Conservations camps have enrolled 16,000 more.

"In these three services, more than 1,666,000 were employed in May, reducing those entirely without work to 8,600,000. The Government emergency pay roll in these services is more than $80,000,000 a month.

Idle's Need Held Greater.

"Need is greater among the millions unemployed than it was at this time last year. In April, 1933, there were 4,475,000 families on relief rolls; in April this year the ure was approximately 3,650,000, with about 750,000 on the ERA work program, or a total of 4,600,000.

"Federal payments for relief were $73,000,000 last April, compared to $150,000,000 for relief and ERA work program this year. The increased cost is due to greater need and to the improvement in relief payments.

"The fact that more than 10,000,000 still are without work in industry is a basic reason for tardy business recovery. This problem deserves first attention fro mindustriallists; it is not receiving the attention needed. Business men in general are taking no responsibility for these millions, making no general effort to get them back to work.

The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation will purchase 2,000 cars of Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina potatoes, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, announced yesterday. Buying will start immediately at prevailing market prcies. The potatoes will be distributed to needy unemployed.

The potatoes will be distributed to the needy by local relief organizations. Hopkins said they would be given out in addition to relief supplies now being furnished.

Hunting, Fishing Gaining in Virginia

4,000 to 5,000 Increase in Licenses Seen.

Richmond, June 26 (Spl.).—More Virginians are going hunting and fishing each year. L. W. Tyus, fiscal secretary of the State Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, today estimated that between 4,000 and 5,000 more hunting-fishing licenses will have been sold in the State during the fiscal year ending Saturday than during the preceding year.

So confident are the commission's officials that there will be a further increase during the fiscal year beginning July 1 that more licenses are being sent out.

These include 180,750 county licenses, costing $1 each; 45,000 State licenses, costing $3 each, and 3,750 nonresident licenses, costing $15.50 each, all of which are good for both hunting and fishing.

Radio Waves and Ripples

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will settle back to well-earned relaxation in his White House armchair tomorrow night and take the Nation into his confidence via the networks in another of his famed "fireside chats."

On the eve of his departure for a sailfy vacation aboard the U. S. S. Houston, he is expected to review the Administration's program with particular reference to the storm and strife just departed from the Halls of Congress.

Both networks, N. B. C.'s local WRC and WMAL, and C. B. S.'s WJSV will carry the Presidential remarks to hearth and heather starting at 9:30 p. m., lasting for one-half hour.

Columbia's Bob Trout and National's Carleton Smith will be at the President's elbow, as they were on the last such occasion, March 5, to launch the program to their respective listeners. They're old hands at this. Silvery voice and complete aplomb. They're it.

Static.

Betty Barthell (songstress from the South and graduate of Ward-Belmont College) — "I believe in having good times."

Henrietta Schumann (concert pianist heard with Lud Gluskin and his orchestra)—"I seldom practice more than two hours a day."

Fred Waring (from Pennsylvania)—"Many people inquire just what kind of a singer Johnny Davis is. Johnny is what is technically known as a 'scat singer'—a fellow who knows all the words but can't pronounce them."

Lud Gluskin (orchestra leader)—"I believe that the American people are tired of over-arranged music."

Frank Munn (tenor)—"Such songs as 'My Wild Irish Rose,' 'Macushla' and 'Mavourneen' are still the favorites of the listeners-in."

Jack Shilkret (band leader)—"Older tunes contain more decided melodies but lack harmonic arrangements. Present-day sophistication makes a lyric, such as 'Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage,' appear humorous, whereas a generation ago it probably was accepted seriously."

For the first time since he trooped as a minstrel, Irving Kaufman has donned black face, to portray "Lazy Dan, the Minstrel Man," a Sunday C. B. S. feature for the past two years. A vocal quick-change artist, he talks and sings as "Lazy Dan."

WOL airs a new program, "The Town Crier," at 8 p. m. tonight, featuring interesting facts and figures on local matters. The first 15 minutes will consider the "Rent Situation in Washington." This initial broadcast, say the minds of the newly formed American Broadcasting Co., should prove of interest to lessee as well as lessor.

That certain compositions excite, elate, or depress—playing at will upon the emotions—started a little argument between Conductors Mark Warnow and Freddie Rich, two of Columbia's leading maestros.

Asked to nominate types of music which produced the most intense emotional reactions, from gayety to melancholia, they couldn't agree on a single number.

Warnow's selections were the gayest, "Espana" by Chabrier; most soothing, "Andante Cantabile" by Tschaikowsky; most stirring, "Stars and Stripes Forever" by Sousa; most romantic, Chopin's waltz Opus 69, No. 2; most suggestive of outdoors and nature, "Morning" by Grieg; most stimulating, Ravel's "Bolero"; most amusing, "By Heck" by S. R. Henry; most effective children's piece, "The Glow Worm" by Lancke.

Rich's nominations—Gayest, Strauss' waltzes; most soothing, "Kamenoi Ostrow" by Rubinstein; most stirring, the French national anthem, "Marseillaise;" most romantic, the Love Duet from "Tristan and Isolde" by Wagner; most suggestive of outdoors and nature, Beethoven's "Pastoral Symphony;" most stimulating, "Toreador Song" from "Carmen" by Bizet; most melancholy, parts of the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert; most amusing, "Badinage" by Herbert; most effective children's piece, "Casse Noisette" by Tschaikowsky.

PONDEROUS, white-vested, Giulio Gatti Casazza, opera's No. 1 manager, announces that Miss Helen Jepson, soloist with Paul Whiteman's music, has been engaged by the Metropolitan Opera Company.

This, according to N. B. C. minds, came as a result of her singing over their networks. It's a rare occasion when radio sends a chanteuse to trill bits of "Pagliacci."

You may hear Miss Jepson tomorrow night at 10 o'clock singing "The Jewel Song" from "Faust," and "I Carry Your Picture in a Locket"—over an N. B. C. network, of course.

Peery to Name New Fish Body

Action Has Been Withheld Pending Audit of Virginia Books.

Richmond, June 26 (AP).—Gov. Peery today said he not only planned to have a commissioner of fisheries, but also replace the entire commission of four.

The commissioner and commission members are appointed at the pleasure of the Governor, and Gov. Peery today pointed out that all five now serving are appointees of a former executive.

Appointment of a commissioner has been withheld pending the completion of an audit. Meanwhile Commissioner Richard Armstrong, of Hampton, has continued at the head of the body, which regulates Tidewater fisheries of the State.

Besides Commissioner Armstrong, members of the commission are State Senator George W. Layman, of New Castle; Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, of Leesburg; Dr. W. F. Kellam, of Accomac, and J. Davis Reed, of Portsmouth.

Terrapin Age Set At 3 Score and 10

Frederick County Man Checks Dates on Shell.

Winchester, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—Following a Woodstock (Va.) report that a farmer there believes he has "clocked" the speed of a terrapin, a Frederick County farmer says he believes the maximum age of a terrapin is near the biblical "three score and ten."

Ernest Davis, a tenant on the Miles B. Dean farm in the county, came to town yesterday with a terrapin on which had been carved the dates 1871, 1898 and 1912. It appears that the terrapin was full grown when the first date was inscribed.

Examination of the terrapin disclosed that it shows the wear of years. Its shell showed a fracture, probably the result of having been run over by some vehicle, and the animal was blind in one eye.

Garrett County Race Broadens

4 More Candidates File, Making 27 in All, for G.O.P. Places.

Oakland, Md., June 26 (Spl.).—Four more candidates for political office have appeared on the horizon, making a total of 27 thus far in the Republican primary fight in Garrett County.

Two candidates, John A. Long, Kitzmiller, and George W. Margraff, Accident, aspire to the office of county commissioner against nine others.

Two others, Merritt S. Harvey, of near Oakland, and Dorsey T. Ashby, of near Crellin, want the office of sheriff, opposing six other candidates.

Mr. Long is a former member of the House of Delegates. Mr. Margraff is the son of a former commissioner and county tax collector. Mr. Harvey is a war veteran and a member of one of the pioneer families of the county. Mr. Ashby also is a member of a pioneer family.

The Democrats to announce thus far are Harper Bartlett for the House of Delegates, on a wet platform, and Clarence Spear, present deputy sheriff, who seeks the nomination for sheriff.

The present sheriff, George F. Haentfling, is a Democrat and is the first of that party to fill the office in this county in years.

Fire in Salisbury Ravages Building

Upstairs Family Flees as Grocery Burns.

Salisbury, Md., June 26 (Spl.).—A fire in the Wroten Building called all the city's fire apparatus to the scene early this morning.

The first floor of the three-story brick building in the heart of the west side business district was gutted. The family of Walter Davis, on the second floor, fled with what scant clothing they could grab. Stock and fixtures of the D. W. Wroten Grocery on the ground floor were a complete loss. The fire was believed due to a defective motor used for refrigeration. Damage was estimated at $10,000.

Woman Charges She Was Beaten With Stick.

Waynesboro, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—Four Waynesboro men were held for the grand jury after a lengthy preliminary hearing before Judge A. C. Kimler this afternoon on charges of malicious assault on Mrs. Frank Henderson, wife of a city employe. The men were Wilbur Wright, Charles Terrell and his two sons, Ward and Lewis Terrell.

The men had been out on $280 bonds since their arrest on May 22. The bonds were continued.

Presbyterian Young People Of Va. Convene

More Than 500 Attend Massanetta Springs Bible Conference.

By C. B. Carr.

Harrisonburg, Va., June 26.—The first in a series of Bible conferences to be held at Massanetta Springs rural religious retreat near here, began last night when more than 500 members of the Presbyterian Young Peoples League Conference of the Synod of Virginia opened their annual meeting.

The youthful church people were addressed by the conference president, Theodric Roberts, of Chase City, last night. Mr. Roberts urged mental relaxation and greater attention to a study of the biblical truths.

Religious study filled the forenoon program today and athletic contests were held in the afternoon. Those at the camp rise each morning at 7:30, breakfast at 8 and enter into private devotions at 8:30 a. m. Religious classes are held throughout the forenoon. Each evening there is a vesper service, followed by song service, clan meeting and then the parting "lights out."

Leading laymen and clergy of the Virginia Synod are the speakers. The Rev. Dr. E. G. Gammon delivers daily inspirational talks. Morning devotional exercises are in charge of the Rev. Dr. Frank C. Brown and vesper services are conducted by the Rev. G. Grier Davis. Conference music is under the direction of the Rev. E. M. Ellis.

The Rev. P. Cary Adams and Col. S. M. Heflin have charge of recreation. Bible courses are supervised by the Rev. J. J. Murray, D. D.

There is much competition between the different clans which are studying the Bible. Each has a leader; all are graded, and the leading clan will be commended at the end of the conference. Clan leaders include Misses Henrietta Dunlap, Ruth McGehee, Alice Gronau, Barbara Schwartz, Clara Payne, Alice Harrison, Elinor Curry, Maude Hudson, Miss Cary Adams, Mrs. Marjorie Tag, Mrs. J. N. Thomas, Mrs. Clarence Bennett, Mrs. Victor Wood, Walton Suggs, the Rev. J. N. Thomas, the Rev. J. M. Curr, the Rev. Hiram L. Reeves, the Rev. Charles M. Jones and the Rev. W. C. Jamison.

Following the Presbyterian conference, which ends July 2, there will be a Methodist assembly, July 2 to 8; the camp for intermediate boys and girls, July 9 to 15; Lutheran Church workers' conference, July 30 to August 5, and the Baptist assembly, August 6 to 12. The sacred music festival will be held July 16 to 22. On July 20, Dr. John Finley Williamson, head of the famous Westminster Choir School, of Princeton, N. J., will lead 2,000 voices in singing sacred numbers.

Massanetta Springs, a mecca for the youth of the State in search of an outing and religious instruction, was originally intended as a boys' school. Years ago J. R. Lupton, of Rockingham County, deeded the Massanetta Springs properties to Hampden - Sydney College, Hampden-Sydney, Va., operated by the Presbyterian Church. After the college found it could not operate the place as a boys' school, the Presbyterian Synod of Virginia elected a board of trustees to operate the property under the title of the "Massanetta Springs Bible Conference."

Scenic Route Parley Called

North Carolinians to Ask Ickes for Share in Highway.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, arranged yesterday for a North Carolina delegation to talk with Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, tomorrow about the route for the proposed scenic highway to connect the Shenandoah National Park in Virginia and the Great Smoky Mountain National Park in North Carolina and Tennessee.

Although the route chosen for the proposed $16,000,000 highway has not been made public, North Carolinians have expressed anxiety that it will not be favorable to their State.

The delegation will call upon Mr. Ickes to impress upon him North Carolina's belief that it should share equally with Tennessee, Senator Bailey said.

Gov. Ehringhaus of North Carolina; E. B. Jeffress, State highway commissioner; Senator Bailey and Representative R. L. Doughton are expected to be members of the delegation.

Representative Weaver, of North Carolina, said recently he believed the highway route recommended by a special committee called for the proposed road to turn toward Tennessee near Linville, N. C., skipping the Mount Mitchell and Craggy Ridges in North Carolina. Such a route would make Gatlinburg, Tenn., the main entrance to the Great Smoky Mountain National Park, the area of which is about equally divided between North Carolina and eastern Tennessee.

Ministers of churches from regional districts are holding a five-day conference which will close Friday, so that they may be in their pulpits Sunday. The children's conference is for those of the second to sixth grades, inclusive.

The majority of the sessions is devoted to class study. Some of students avail themselves of credits awarded upon completion of prescribed courses in qualifying as professional Sunday school teachers. The conference is under supervision of the Rev. Nathaniel B. Gorthop, Whitemarsh, president of the governing board; the Rev. Angus Dunn, Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, Mass., chaplain of conference, in charge of adult division. The children's division is headed by Deaconess Frances Rose Edwards, with Miss Frances Young as director.

The clerical groups discussion today was directed by the Rev. Wilbur L. Caswell, of St. Paul's Church, Yonkers, N. Y., contributor to the New York Churchman, liberal publication of the Episcopal Church. Tomorrow the Rev. Caswell will be succeeded by the Rev. George C. Foley, of the Philadelphia divinity school.

Youth Questioned On Bogus Money

Admits Purchasing Bills, Richmond Police Say.

Richmond, June 26 (AP).—Harvey Odell Harris, 23, who gave his address as Spartanburg, S. C., was questioned at police headquarters today and turned over to Federal authorities to answer a charge of possessing and distributing counterfeit money.

Harris was arrested yesterday afternoon after 18 Richmond merchants had reported receiving counterfeit bills in exchange for merchandise. Officials said they found $170 in bad money in Harris' luggage. The arrest was made after he had presented a $5 bill at the box office of a motion-picture house.

Officers today said Harris had confessed to buying $300 in counterfeit money in New York and to passing the bills on his way to his home in South Carolina. He was quoted as saying he paid $30 a hundred for the bills, which were of $5 and $10 denominations.

NRA Complaints Show Increase

Better Knowledge by Public, Says Va. Official.

Richmond, June 26 (AP).—A better public knowledge of NRA provisions was said yesterday by Dr. John J. Corson 3d to have brought an increase of complaints alleging violations. He said a large number, upon investigation, were found to be justified.

Dr. Corson, assistant State labor compliance officer, is at Norfolk today on a trip to confer with code authorities and labor officials.

Ninety-three complaints alleging code violations have been received at NRA offices here within the past week, 25 being rejected at once on ground that the allegations were without foundation. Labor complaints, alleging some violation of wages and hours of work provisions, constituted 62 of the remaining 68. The NRA settled 31 cases during the week and now has 169 cases pending, of which 147 are labor complaints. The others relate to alleged violations of trade practices.

Baltimore Plans Sailors' Welcome

Baltimore, June 26 (Spl.).—This city will play host over Independence Day to the crew of the U. S. Cruiser Northampton, which has been assigned to tie up in Baltimore Harbor over the holidays.

The ship is expected to arrive Saturday from Norfolk, and will remain a week.

An elaborate reception is planned. Nearly one-third of the crew have their homes in Baltimore and Maryland. Many of the crew will greet relatives here or will be given brief leave of absence to visit their homes. Mayor Jackson has appointed a committee of 25 business men to greet officially the Northampton's commander and staff. The vessel will be open to public inspection here.

New Tube May Cut Power Cost, Aid Farm Area

Electrical Expert Tells Research Group of Late Invention.

Baltimore, June 26 (Spl.).—Development of electric vacuum tubes of many thousands of times the capacity of tubes now in use will virtually revolutionize the use of electricity throughout the Nation, it was said today by Dr. Irving Langmuir, research expert for the General Electric laboratories.

Dr. Langmuir is one of the lecturers in the annual conference on physical chemistry conducted by the Johns Hopkins University at Gibson Island, in Anne Arundel County. He spoke today before a group of experts from all parts of the United States.

The type of tubes to be used in modifying the use of electricity will not be strictly vacuum tubes, he said, as they will contain gas at low pressure. They will make possible a wider extension of the use electricity due to lowered cost. He explained the new-type tubes as follows:

"Today a farmer may look above his yard and see high voltage electric transmission lines crossing his land, while his wife, indoors, lights a kerosene lamp. He can't use that power because the cost of reducing the voltage to his needs is too great. That is one of the things which the vacuum tubes will change.

"Now cables bring the power from the source to the substations. There we plan to substitute the tubes for the present transforming stations.

"With the tubes either direct or alternating current could be used. Railroads would find electrification more attractive because it would be cheaper and more flexible. Electrical power will be made available at reasonable rates to thousands of homes and communities."

15 Carloads to Be Placed for Pasturage by FERA.

Richmond, June 26 (Spl.).—Fifteen carloads of cattle from the drought areas of the Northwest will be brought into Virginia the end of this week by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for pasturage. Additional cattle will follow as more acreage is available.

Two carloads will be consigned to Orange County, two to Fauquier, two to Bedford, one to Albemarle, four to Hanover, two to Chesterfield and two to King William, Sidney Adair, executive State emergency relief administrator, said.

The cattle, ranging from yearlings to 2 year olds, will be inspected, tested and branded on their arrival under the supervision of Dr. Harvey C. Givens, State veterinarian.

The survey of the State, conducted to determine pasturage available for use in the drought emergency, is continuing. Land used for grazing the cattle will be rented at the usual rate.

Witnesses Sample Evidence Seized In Bootleg Case

Baltimore, June 26 (Spl.).—Two colored witnesses considered it a privilege to testify today in a liquor law violation case. They were called upon to sample the evidence—and how they sampled it.

William Smallwood was accused of selling "white mule" and was facing a judge in Criminal Court. On the table beside him was a bottle of liquor police said they had seized in a raid on his home.

Up came the two witnesses. They testified they had purchased liquor from Smallwood, and the prosecuting attorney inquired if it was similar to that in the bottle.

"'Deed, boss, I can't tell unless I sample it," one witness said.

He was given a liberal drink of the evidence in a paper cup, and pronounced it similar to that he had bought from Smallwood. The other witness drank his straight from the bottle and then agreed with his co-witness.

Smallwood was found guilty, but sentence was suspended pending a new trial motion.

Harrisonburg Area Asks Milk Control

Producers Seeking Higher Prices Demand Action.

Richmond, June 26 (AP).—Milk producers and distributors of the Harrisonburg Milk Shed, seeking higher prices, today invited the new Virginia Milk Commission to control milk prices and praceices in the Harrisonburg area, and the commission accepted.

David Shanks, heading a delegation of milk producers and distributors, in a public hearing, said milk prices in Harrisonburg are as low as 5 cents a quart. Other representatives said the average price for a grade 4 per cent milk is 8 cents a quart wholesale and 9 cents retail. They added that they hope to have the price raised to 10 cents wholesale, and 11 cents retail.

Buried Jewelry Story False, Grave Robbers Are Warned

Vandals Attempt to Enter Tombs Under Dahlgren Church.

Hagerstown, Md., June 26 (Spl.).—The report that $3,500 in jewelry was buried with Mrs. Madeline V. Dahlgren, in a tomb beneath the little Catholic Church at Dahlgren, on top of South Mountain, is only a myth, William H. Kline, caretaker of the estate, stated in warning that another visit by vandals would result in arrests.

Vandals have broken into two of the seven tombs beneath the church where the Dahlgrens worshipped.

The first attempt was made May 19 when a lock on the iron gate leading into the tombs was found broken. Kline replaced the lock, but several days later found that it had been removed again and two of the tombs had been entered.

Kline communicated with descendants of the Dahlgren family and was informed yesterday that the report is false.

Mrs. Dalhgren was the wife of Admiral Joseph A. Dahlgren, naval hero of the Civil War and inventor of the Dahlgren gun used on warships during Civil War days.

Virginia Board Of Liquor Sale Pays Own Way

Income Defrays Expense, Leaving $250,000 Fund Intact.

Richmond, June 26 (Spl.).—The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will reach the end of the current fiscal year without having touched the $250,000 appropriation granted the board by the 1934 assembly, it was learned today.

Expenditures of the board will total about $1,100,000 by June 30, but the receipts from sales, amounting thus far to about $700,000, have been kept revolving so that the board has not had to dip into its starting appropriation. Stocks of liquor now on hand are estimated to be worth about $400,000 so that cash plus stock balances the outgo thus far.

If payment for automobiles, office equipment, shelving, improvements to buildings and other capital expenses were to be spread over the life of the improvements, the board already would be showing a neat profit balance, according to the figures.

The $1,100,000 expenditures to date include capital outlay as well as liquor purchases.

The board began operations on March 22, and in May began opening its liquor stores. The profits from the four Richmond stores sufficed to launch other stores one and two at a time, and also to finance the A. B. C. department.

Technically the board is about $400,000 overdrawn at this time, but the overdraft is represented by stocks which sell well within the ten-day credit period on which purchases are made.

The board's $250,000 appropriation for the establishment of the A. B. C. department was made for a two-year and six-month period by the 1934 Assembly. There is every indication now that the appropriation will never be used and may be added to the profit balance of the board at the end of the 1935-36 fiscal year.

Bank Charges Nolle Prossed

Coblentz Cases Dropped at Request of State's Attorney.

Nolle prosequies have been entered in the three Montgomery County indictments charging Emory L. Coblentz, former president of the Central Trust Co. of Maryland, with accepting deposits when he knew the institution to be insolvent.

The nolle prosequies have been approved by Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard upon motion of State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, he announced yesterday. Prescott contended that inasmuch as the judges have passed on the question heretofore in favor of Coblentz in similar cases in Frederick, nothing could be accomplished in bringing the same charges before the same judges.

The indictments alleged that deposits were accepted from the Rev. Guy Crook, rector of the Poolesville Episcopal Church; the Rev. William D. King, pastor of the Poolesville Methodist Church, and Benjamin White, Poolesville district farmer, by the Poolesville Branch of the trust company on September 2, 1931.

Norfolk Labor Aids Flay Liquor Board

State Stores' Workers' Hours Called "Inhuman."

Norfolk, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—The Norofik Central Labor Union last night adopted a resolution denouncing the A. B. C. board of Virginia for compelling employes of State liquor stores to work "inhuman hours," for having the store fixtures made by "penitentiary" labor and for the "employment of non-union and cheap labor" in carpenter work.

The resolution also condemns the board for charging more for whisky in Virginia than it can be bought for in Washington. J. Fred Cherry, former president of the State Federation of Labor, chairman of a committee that investigated conditions, accused the board of endeavoring to build a machine in Viginia.

"There is such a thing as a machine becoming too strong and union labor will not support any machine that tries to get rich at the expense of the people," he said. He said employes in the State stores are required to work from 12 to 16 hours per day.

New Schedule For Albemarle Courts Told

County Officers to Study Working of System in Henrico.

Charlottesville, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—The schedule of court sessions, at which Trial Justice W. B. Colthurst will preside under the new system which supplants the magisterial courts July 1, was announced here today as Albemarle County officers prepared to visit Henrico County to see how the system is worked there.

Mr. Colthurst, County Executive Henry Haden, Commonwealth's Attorney W. O. Fife and Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Robert E. Taylor will go to Richmond tomorrow to confer with Trial Justice Pitt and other Henrico officers. They will be especially intent upon seeing how the court records are kept.

Quarters above the Peoples Bank at Crozet will be used for a courtroom. The first session will be held there next Tuesday. Mr. Haden went to Scottsville today to negotiate for a courtroom there.

The schedule, worked out with the sanction of Judge Lemuel Smith of Circuit Court, calls for sessions at Charlottesville in the center of the county, Crozet in the western section, and Scottsville in the southeastern part. Hearings in the courthouse here will be continued.

Mr. Colthurst said issuing justices had been asked to make their warrants returnable in accordance with the following schedule:

Charlottesville—Mondays, 10 a. m., for civil cases only; Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, at the same hour, for criminal cases.

Crozet—Tuesdays, 10 a. m., for civil and criminal cases.

Scottsville—Thursdays, 10 a. m., for civil and criminal cases.

Political Scene Shifts to Shore

Maryland Candidates to Attend Bar Convention at Atlantic City.

Baltimore, June 26 (Spl.).—Activity in the Maryland political arena during the next two or three days will shift to Atlantic City, where the Maryland Bar Association opens its annual convention tomorrow night.

Since most of the candidates for the nomination for Governor are lawyers and members of the bar association, they will go to the New Jersey resort to attend the convention and mingle with other lawyers who are political powers in their respective districts.

Gov. Ritchie left last night for Atlantic City after filing his papers of candidacy for a fifth term at Annapolis.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, also seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor, probably will go to Atlantic City Thursday. Senator Millard E. Tydings, sponsor of the Radcliffe gubernatorial boom, will go Friday, and Mr. Radcliffe also probably will go later in the week.

Whether Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, will attend the convention, is not known. He is not a lawyer, but may decide it is to his interests to attend.

Republican cadidates also will attend the convention, among them, Harry W. Nice and H. Webster Smith, and possibly United States Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 26 (Spl.).—Miss Eleanor Perry, of Charles Town, W. Va., a former princess at the Winchester (Va.) Apple Blossom Festival, and an attractive member of Charles Town's younger social set, will be recognized as "Queen of the Air" here Sunday and the central figure in the first air show of the season sponsored by Berkeley Aviation Club. Wholesale Jobs For Maryland Gained in 1933

Census Bureau Finds Pick-up Substantial and More Than Seasonal.

A decided improvement in wholesale trade employment in Maryland during 1933 is revealed in preliminary figures released yesterday by William L. Austin, director of the Census Bureau.

"When both full-time and part-time employment are considered, it becomes clear that the improvement during the year 1933 was substantial and more than seasonal," Director Austin said.

"According to the 1929 Census of Distribution, the seasonal variation in such employment for Maryland is about 4 per cent for both full-time and part-time employment combined, the peak being reached about October. If it is assumed that 1929 was fairly typical, it would appear that the last few months of 1933 showed more than seasonal betterment."

Year End Shows 10% Increase.

Based on the average number of full-time employes engaged in the wholesale trade of the State, the year end showed a 10 per cent increase over the beginning. September, October and November also showed a 9 per cent increase over the previous January.

The census, which was undertaken by Civil Works employes assigned to the Bureau, showed 2,203 wholesale establishments in the State. Their net sales amounted to $367,697,000 during 1933, with payment of $22,858,000 in salaries.

In 1933 the volume of business was 50.4 per cent under 1929 salaries. Wages were 30.9 per cent lower, and employes decreased 9.7 per cent.

Earnings 23% Under 1929.

"Since payrolls decreased about three times as much as the number of employes, it would appear that earnings of employes engaged in Maryland wholesale trade in 1933 were about 23 per cent less than in 1929," Austin said.

The average annual sales per employe in the State showed a reduction of $14,870 (from $32,997 to $18,127 per employ.) partly because of lower prices prevailing in 1933, which necessitated handling a larger physical volume per dollar of sales.

January	16,451	3,141
February	16,671	3,062
March	16,536	2,899
April	16,410	2,857
May	16,461	2,691
June	16,601	3,353
July	16,899	2,864
August	17,441	2,869
September	17,963	3,511
October	18,035	3,571
November	17,979	3,587
December	18,191	3,579

Carter Differs With Mitchell On Byrd Policy

Senator's Failure to Back Tugwell Supported by Virginia Speaker.

Richmond, June 26 (AP).—Shirley Carter, of Winchester, today took issue with Dr. S. C. Mitchell, of the University of Richmond, on Dr. Mitchell's assertion that Senator Byrd was inconsistent in opposing Rexford G. Tugwell, as Undersecretary of Agriculture.

Dr. Mitchell, speaking at Randolph-Macon College, said Byrd made an excellent Governor and taught Virginians the value of using experts in political affairs, but that it was inconsistent to attack one of the President's experts called around him in applying the principle planted in Virginia by Byrd.

Carter said it was correct that experts were employed in Virginia, but that Dr. Mitchell had overlooked the fact their recommendations were then submitted to a commission of 30 business men.

"To my mind," said Carter, "there is a vast difference between first obtaining the advice of governmental experts and having such advice reviewed by men of business ability, as compared to placing in executive positions men without practical experience, who are only trained as scientists and economists in an abstract way."

Krol May Send Plea to Peery

Winchester Hears Report Woolen Man's Petition Is Already In.

Winchester, Va., June 26 (Spl.). Rumors in Winchester this afternoon were to the effect that a petition for a pardon of Max Krol, recently denied a writ of error in the Virginia Supreme Court, has been presented to Gov. Peery.

Krol was convicted here on a charge of embezzlement of $4,412.32 from the Arthur G. Jones Woolen Mill Corporation. The jury recommended six years in the penitentiary.

Krol's bail for $5,000 was recently called by Judge Philip Williams and a scire facias was issued summoning Krol to appear in corporation court July 16 to show cause why his bail should not be forfeited.

An effort to verify the report through the office of Gov. Peery was unsuccessful today.

Krol's cousin, Meyer Ginsburg, Chicago attorney, recently was here in behalf of the defendant, said Krol is very ill. He declared if the former manufacturer is moved, he might "arrive in Winchester a corpse."

William & Mary Alumni Draft 6-Point Plan to Improve College

Would Limit Number of Out-of-State Students and Raise Faculty.

Williamsburg, Va., June 26 (AP).—A six-point program for the College of William and Mary is contained in resolutions passed by the Boston (Mass.) William and Mary Alumni Association for the consideration of the institution's board of visitors which meets here next Saturday.

The resolution provides for:

"1. A strengthening of the scholastic standards of the college by elemination of all student instructors; reducing the teaching load so that there will be more time for preparation, and research may be possible; increasing the compensation of the faculty so that the best instructors may be attracted.

Would Limit Admissions.

"2. Strengthening of the admission standards with a definite objective of reducing the great discrepancy now existing between the number admitted to the college and the number graduated four years later. In this connection they believe that the number of out-of-State students should be limited sufficiently so that the institution may remain primarily a Virginia school.

"3. Concentration on a liberal arts curriculum.

"4. A general liberalization of present rules governing student conduct insofar as possible without endangering the high standards of the college.

Increased Faculty Control.

"5. Increased faculty control in the administration of the internal affairs of the college.

"6. A reduction of the number of women students so that the ratio existing between the two sexes may be in accordance with the State law which specifies that the ratio of men to women be six to four."

Beckley, W. Va., June 26 (Spl.). Trials of Edgar C. Lawson, former State auditor, and two associates under charges of fraud in the sale of securities have been continued until October by Judge Harley M. Kilgore, of the Raleigh County Criminal Court.

A special term of the court is to be held, however, to determine the question of jurisdiction, Judge Kilgore announces, as counsel for Lawson have challenged this point. The special session will be held as soon as State attorneys can furnish the defense lawyers with a bill of particulars.

Lawson was indicted for conspiracy to defraud in the sale of securities of the Guaranty Investment Co., of Charleston, of which he was president. The company, which had approximately 4,000 security holders in West Virginia, was placed in receivership several months ago.

Miller Aspires To State Senate

Politics in Washington Co. Md., Are Enlivened.

Hagerstown, Md., June 26 (Spl.). Washington County politics were further enlivened with the filing for the State Senate by Ernest W. Miller, Republican member of the House of Delegates.

He is the first Republican to file for that office, but it was learned that State's Attorney J. Lloyd Harshman, whose term expires this fall, may also file for the Senate as a Republican. Other Republicans mentioned are Harry Brindle, attorney, and Lancelot Jacques, jr.

Senator William D. Bryon, Democratic incumbent, is expected to run again. He may have opposition from the Wade faction in the county.

New St. Mary's Health Officer Appointed

Leonardtown, Md., June 26 (Spl.). Dr. St. Clare Campbell has been appointed health officer for St. Mary's County.

He will reside at Mechanicsville. Dr. Campbell was former health officer for Charles County, but resigned to take a post-graduate course in connection with his work and has now assumed his duties in this county. The office was formerly filled by the late Dr. David Bowden.

Lawyer to Direct Play.

Winchester, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—John J. Williams, Winchester attorney, has been selected to direct the forthcoming Little Theater play, "Cradle Snatchers," to be presented here shortly.

No Machine Gun Owners Register in Virginia

Richmond, June 26 (Spl.).—If there are any machine guns which should be registered under the new act, Peter Saunders, secretary of the Commonwealth, has not yet heard about them.

Exempting such machine guns as are used by the National Guard, the State police, and for markers and monuments, along with guns in one or two other classifications, the new law requires that all machine guns and sub-machine guns be registered with the secretary of the Commonwealth.

A Popular Campaign.

The campaign launched by the Catholic Church against indecent moving pictures is rapidly gaining ground. Recommendation of a boycott of socially objectionable films has been made to the constituent Protestant denominations by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. This, together with the approving attitude of many Jewish leaders, gives the movement the inclusive and nonsectarian attitude it should possess for full effectiveness.

Side by side with the occasional production of films of great eauty and power the American motion picture industry has prostituted its talents by flooding the country, and the world, with degrading, salacious and often virtually obscene presentations. Public opinion, properly slow to move where anything of the character of censorship is involved, has endured this vicious trend with remarkable patience. But the depths to which decent feelings have been antagonized is indicated by the universal response to the leadership which the churches are now properly giving.

It may be assumed that a campaign backed by such intensity of feeling, and such power of organization, will quickly make its influence felt among the producers. If Hollywood is wise it will discontinue films of the type against which public resentment is flaming out in no uncertain manner.

Failure to respond cooperatively to the present campaign could only lead to effective demands not merely for temporary boycotts but also permanent censorship at source. And rigid censorship would probably affect adversely the notable artistic achievement which Hollywood has often demonstrated it can accomplish. These truly great pictures, it is encouraging to observe, are generally at least as successful from the box-office viewpoint as the films which are a constant source of anxiety to parents the country over.

Roots Of The New Deal

Senator Robinson's bold assertion that his party has lived up to its campaign pledges is truly staggering. "It makes no difference," the majority leader told a radio audience, "what phase of the New Deal you may have in mind, you will find the roots of the idea in the declaration of principles made by the Democrats in the Chicago convention."

Well, with dark glasses it might be possible to discern the roots of the NRA in the declaration in favor of "strict and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices." And with some blinking it might be argued that "a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards" really meant devaluation of the dollar and expansion of silver in our monetary reserves.

But with all the mental agility in the world it is a little difficult to see how the New Deal has sprung from the first promises in this "covenant with the people to be faithfully kept by the party when entrusted with the power." They read as follows:

1. An immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and offices, consolidating departments and bureaus, and eliminating extravagance, to accomplish a saving of not less than 25 per cent in the cost of Federal Government.

2. Maintenance of the National credit by a Federal budget annually balanced on the basis of accurate executive estimates within revenues. . .

But Senator Robinson's address certainly does prove that elasticity in political interpretation is not a lost art.

The Chicago Experiment.

Robert Maynard Hutchins is a young man whose education has been thorough and fully in accord with accepted American college standards. That he has made good use of his opportunities is obvious from the fact that he is head of the University of Chicago. That he is sympathetic to the problems of those who have been less fortunate than himself in becoming educated is one of the virtues he displays in this important capacity. His latest official venture is interesting.

He has announced that the doors of the university will be opened to all who might profit by study whether they have had previous academic training or not. This is rather a sweeping statement, but it does not express quite as radical a departure from the traditional as might appear. Only those who possess the proper intellectual capacities will be counted as eligible, it being assumed that the university will set the intellectual standards which will have to be lived up to. All those with a thirst for learning, whether or not they wish to work toward a college degree, will be given opportunity to avail themselves of the full facilities of the university.

This is a welcome move, for there are many who would benefit greatly by the courses offered by a great university like Chicago without any particular bearing on a degree. This system seemingly allows for the definite pursuit of tangible education, rather than the mere acquisition of a diploma as proof that one has been through college. It has long been accepted as normal in European universities, but heretofore has been discouraged by most of our established institutions of higher learning, where curriculum has perhaps been emphasized at the expense of culture.

Muddling Through.

It is impossible to study the two most recent controversies in which the NRA has been involved without anxiety as to the direction of its policy. On one hand, this has brought about the closing of a hosiery mill in Harriman, Tenn., because the operators are alleged to have refused to bargain collectively with their employes. On the other hand, the attitude of Gen. Johnson toward the labor union in his own organization seems diametrically opposed to that applied to private employers.

Closing of the Harriman mills is particularly important because the issue turns upon the controversial Section 7(a) of the Recovery Act, giving employes the right to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing. The National Labor Board charged the mill operators with "bad faith" and infringement upon the rights of their employes. It recommended withdrawal of the Blue Eagle. Acting on this advice, NRA has made an example of the Harriman mills, in spite of the fact that 653 workers will lose their jobs and will become dependent upon relief doles.

Fulminations of disaster for industries defying the NRA are thus carried into effect. Even if the case against the Harriman mills were clear cut, the wisdom of such a policy might be open to some question. But the case is by no means clear cut.

The legality of Section 7(a) is still a matter of controversy. According to the attorney for the company, the Department of Justice has advised Gen. Johnson that it has investigated the situation and finds that there has been no violation of the law or the hosiery code. This charge the NRA does not deny. Moreover, it is charged that the evidence on which the labor board made its recommendation was unsworn and illegal testimony. Still more serious is the unproven accusation that officials of the labor board and the NRA advised the company to indulge in trickery to appease employes on strike.

Gen. Johnson's dealings with the union in his own organization are a curious foil to the policy pursued at Harriman. Dismissal of John Donovan, president of the NRA union, because of his attempt at collective bargaining, has been followed by suspension of Dr. A. G. Silverman, one of the employes who interceded in Donovan's behalf. In both cases reasons outside of the labor union issue have been found, but evidence points strongly toward the belief that these two men have been ousted because of their attempts to influence NRA policy in dealing with its employes.

Unions in the Government service are an unwelcome anomaly. Successful collective bargaining with a bureau chief or an administrator, who is himself controlled by law, is impossible. The sporadic labor movement in the NRA seems to be largely concerned with employe working conditions. But these ought to be settled through extension of the civil service. Gen. Johnson seems, however, to be taking no steps toward the establishment of civil service protection for his employes. Rather he is dealing with them in the same arbitrary manner employed by those industrialists who will tolerate only company unions.

In both of these controversies the NRA has acted impulsively, apparently without weighing the consequences in advance. When an agency undertakes to regulate the business of a nation, certainly more deliberate and thoughtful action should be expected.

Feverish Capital Movements.

Dr. Amos E. Taylor, of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, has completed a very instructive study on international capital movements during 1933. He estimates that during the past year Americans made new investments abroad amounting to $786,000,000.

During this same period, however, we resold to foreigners $565,000,000 of foreign stocks and bonds, while foreigners bought American stocks and bonds and made direct investments here totaling $767,000,000. At the same time $580,000,000 of American stocks and bonds were repurchased from foreigners. After allowing for these offsetting transactions, and for bond redemptions and sinking fund payments, Dr. Taylor estimates that the United States received $49,000,000 more on long-term capital account from abroad than it transferred to other countries.

In view of all that has been said about the prostration of the market for foreign capital issues, this tremendous influx and outflow of funds for long-term investment may seem surprising. However, the year was remarkable chiefly for the shifts in ownership of outstanding issues. New foreign issues offered in this country were limited to $71,000,000.

The heavy purchases and sales of foreign securities, in fact, reveal the existence of conditions highly inimical to a revival of the new issues market. Thus the heavy purchases of outstanding foreign securities by Americans last year was due in large part to the flight of American capital precipitated by the monetary policies of the Administration. A certain amount of forced investment has also been due to the inability of American investors to withdraw funds from countries operating under exchange restrictions.

On the other hand, increased foreign investments in American securities have been encouraged by unstable conditions abroad, but principally no doubt by the speculative gains and profits obtainable as a result of dollar depreciation. With the dollar devalued, opportunities for picking up security bargains greatly increased. Furthermore, the repurchase of undervalued foreign issues was stimulated, the Germans having been especially active in repatriation of their own dollar issues on highly favorable terms.

This restless movement to and fro of long-term capital does not indicate increase of confidence in the international financial outlook. On the contrary, it shows a fundamental instability. Capital is no longer moving where it is needed, to take advantage of profitable opportunities for employment. It is fleeing here and there, and being converted from one investment form into another, in the hope of avoiding new losses or obtaining speculative gains.

While such conditions prevail, there is little chance for a revival of the foreign investment market, which will bring new capital into the field.

Ritchie For Governor.

Albert Cabell Ritchie has effectively closed the door on efforts to get him to abandon his ambition to be a fifth-term Governor and run instead for the Senate. He has filed papers for his gubernatorial candidacy and asserts that "I would rather be Governor of Maryland than Senator from all the United States."

That statement is in the best tradition of Maryland, where the people regard the Governor as second only to the President of the United States. This reverence for the office has made a long line of Governors more conscious of their responsibilities and has resulted in good local government, much needed in these days when it is the fashion to let the Federal Administration assume all cares and responsibilities. In too many States the Governorship is but a political stepping stone to the Senate.

Gov. Ritchie's action has opened the way for Howard Bruce to be his running mate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination. Should Mr. Bruce cast his hat into the ring, it also will be in the best tradition of Maryland, where families from generation to generation have turned to public service as a public trust.

Mr. Bruce is the nephew of former Senator William Cabell Bruce, but is perhaps a more practical and energetic type than his distinguished uncle. Well versed in the practices of large industry and finance, he, too, knows his way around the political scene. For years he has been the Maryland Democratic National committeeman and in 1928 managed Alfred E. Smith's campaign in Maryland. In these times when the emphasis is on banking and financial problems, the Senate could use the knowledge Mr. Bruce has acquired through association with the Federal Reserve System and his work in seeking, first to save, and then to rehabilitate, one of Baltimore's largest financial institutions.

There is hope for democracies as long as men of the type of the Bruces and Ritchies find it worth while to risk the vicissitudes of political campaigns in order to make their contribution to good government.

Our Boundary Dispute.

It is not so strange that the seat of the Federal Government should be involved in a boundary dispute 143 years after that site was first designated. Many boundaries are established in a haphazard manner. That is the reason why war is raging in the Chaco today. But the District of Columbia was created for a very definite and important purpose by an act of Congress. Even so, no one knows now exactly where the District ends and the State of Virginia begins.

The Supreme Court has spoken with more conviction than clarity on the subject. In 1921 it decided that an area of land built up from the river bed on the south side of the Potomac was a part of the District, because the original title of Maryland "extended at least to low water mark on the Virginia side." But where is the low water mark?

It is that perplexing question which the District-Virginia Boundary Commission is now tackling. The outcome will be very important because it may involve the title to reclaimed land which is now valuable property, including the Washington Airport. Yet the solution is being undertaken in a most amicable way. If the commission does its work well, both Congress and the Virginia Legislature doubtless will accept its conclusions and write finis upon this ancient controversy.

Of course, this local boundary dispute is not an exact parallel of the differences which brought hostilities between Bolivia and Paraguay. But there is enough similarity to focus attention on the widely contrasting methods of settlement. If the will to accept scientific arbitration and impartial legal judgments were everywhere present, the adjustment of international boundary disputes would be no more formidable than the drawing of a District line south of the Potomac. It is not a matter which stirs us to insist that the corporate honor and political sovereignty of either the District or Virginia are now being jeopardized.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

HISTORIC SALEM, MASS., was recovering from fire that destroyed half of the city at a loss of $12,000,000 and left 18,000 persons homeless. State militia patroled the stricken area as relief committee took charge of feeding and sheltering the victims. Four bodies were found in the charred ruins.

JACK JOHNSON, heavyweight champion of the world, defeated Frank Moran, of Pittsburgh, in 20 rounds of boxing at Paris, France, and thus retained the championship which he won by knocking out Jim Jeffries at Reno, Nev., July 4, 1910. Many notables were among the 15,000 spectators who witnessed the fight.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

JOHN W. DAVIS was expected to be placed in nomination, with others, as candidate for the Democratic choice for President at the New York convention. "Gov. Ritchie and Senator Samuel M. Ralston appeared most likely to win on elimination of Smith and McAdoo," one observer declared. Smith received ovations at yesterday's meeting, but failed to stampede delegates.

Drive for the Promised Land.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well, this depression has trimmed me pretty well. It has got my liquor, my cigars, the use of an automobile and all the rest of the nonessentials. However, I have my head, my health, my books and my typewriter—in fact, practically all the tools of the brain, which, under the new dispensation of governmental guardianship, have ceased to have much, if any, commercial value; and, I might add, that with it all I have still a healthy sense of humor.

And the performance put on by the Senate Agriculture Committee in the examination of Dr. Tugwell appealed especially to that sense. The Senators certainly did make the Tugwell examination a free-for-all scrap among themselves—and that sort of entertainment surely makes for the restoration of depression-frazzled nerves as well as glee and mirth for him who has a genuine sense of humor.

But, seriously, I am apprehensive about this labor situation. It just looks like there is no chance of satisfying our people. The Republican party tried to befriend the big fellows, the manufacturers, merchants, bankers and traders by showing them favors in our tariff policy. Then along came we Democrats with assurances that the laborer and farmer would have their inning.

Well, what do we find? We find that labor is not satisfied with the guarantee that it shall work for maximum hours at a minimum wage without competition from child labor and with the right to bargain collectively. But that does not satisfy. The American Federation of Labor has to step into the picture and assert its right to represent labor in all collective bargaining, though it can't control its own affiliates here in the District of Columbia, where they have been warring among themselves over purely jurisdictional rights while millions of dollars of Government money are tied up by the suspension of work upon Government buildings.

And the farmers! Well, the Lord should make special dispensation for the capable, untiring, honest and sympathetic Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture. Why, 24,000 farmers of his own State of Iowa imposed upon him by exaggerating their acreage, which forced him to have to scale down their Government benefits! Furthermore, he finds that the farmer, after he has rented his land to the Government, persists in cultivating it.

Now, I have some very positive, though old-fashioned, views about this foolishness, for that's what it is, this trying to act the wet-nurse to any class by the Government. The Republicans tried it with industry and got ditched. We Democrats are now trying it with the laborer and the farmer, and we are headed directly for the lowland and the bog. Both will impose upon us to our undoing. We can't meet their demands, and we should tell them that, while we are their friends, we are not in the business of acting the wet-nurse to their whims and fancies, that we will see that they have an open field and a fair fight, but that they must do the fighting for themselves. The sooner this is done the better it will be for the country as well as for the party.

Furthermore, I have the idea that we should somewhere and at some time remember the consumer and taxpayer in this great drive for the promised land. It is costing money, and someone must foot the bill. I want a good drink of whisky now and then, a cigar three times per day, the use of an automobile, to play golf, hunt and fish and do many other things that cost money; but I have my obligations to meet, which I can't do and have these things. So I stay with my books and typewriter—the things that my creditors do not want and therefore generously permit me to retain. In short, if I can't realize my ideal I will try to idealize my real. I know of no other philosophy with which to whip this depression.

JOHN W. HESTER.
Washington, D. C., June 15.

A Woman Peacemaker.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having read your editorial in The Post of June 25 about the arrival of the President-elect of Colombia and on his being a great worker in the cause of Pan-American peace, allow me to say that I have done more for that cause than anybody else by helping Colombia to obtain the ratification of her treaty with the United States after it had been strenuously rejected by the Senate.

The only conditions I stipulated were withdrawal of the Colombian troops invading the Peruvian territory at that time, which Colombia did, averting thereby a war which would have involved the whole South American continent, and also submission of that case to arbitration, which ought to have taken place long ago according to any said stipulations accepted by Colombia.

I have many letters from the late President Leguia of Peru requesting me to continue helping Colombia until her treaty with this country could be ratified, which I did. The moment the ratification was obtained the people at Bogota made great demonstrations of friendship with Peru and in return invited them to the Peruvian Centenary celebrations, from which they were going to be excluded.

TERESA PREVOST.
Washington, June 25.

Christian Environment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many young people raised in Christian homes by devout religious parents start out in life with the highest standards and ideals. Then they leave home and in cities come in contact with individuals without any ideals. Gradually some of their refinement is rubbed off as they knock around alone and are influenced by their associates. Those raised in Christian homes continually meet people whose motto is "Let's eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die"—people who are totally indifferent toward religion.

Although people raised in a Christian environment may yet cling to their ideals, I think in time association with the types of humanity they meet everywhere today can not but deaden their sensibilities to some extent.

Washington's Imperative Need.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to express my congratulations on the improvement which The Post has evidenced during the last few months. One of the most imperative needs of Washington for a number of years has been a first-class morning newspaper. I feel that The Post, at its present rate of progress, will soon fill this need.

Thank You!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May we, too, congratulate The Post on its first anniversary under the new management. We feel that we can voice the sentiment of Washington's Negro population when we say that The Post is entirely fair and unbiased, and a true reporter of the news of Washington, the country and the world.

Post Scholarship Contest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please allow me to express to you and to The Post the warm appreciation of the administration and faculties of Howard University for the very satisfying results obtained in the scholarship competition conducted by your paper for the school year 1933-34. The interest awakened among the pupils of the secondary schools in nearby communities should result in the increase of enrollment from these schools. The selection of competitors in each school has brought to our attention students who may take advantage of other scholarships awarded by Howard University. In this way some of the losers may ultimately become winners.

I have no doubt also that the competition will have great value for the many pupils who did not obtain distinction. The subjects upon which they were requested to write and the books which they were required to read have given them a very helpful acquaintance with the actual and primary problems which face American citizens today. I have no doubt that they have carried away a far more vivid interest in the great history which is now in the making during these years.

I wish you to know that we appreciate the opportunity of cooperating with you now and with the other universities of our city in this educational endeavor. If the competition is continued in subsequent years, the faculties of Howard University, through their representatives, will take pleasure in continued cooperation.

MORDECAI W. JOHNSON,
President, Howard University.

Jefferson's Anecdote.

In his address to the graduates of William and Mary College Secretary Hull undertook with much grave argument to show that there is no material inconsistency between Jeffersonianism and the Federal paternalism of the New Deal. The Secretary made the going much heavier than he might have made it if he had only thought to use Jefferson's version of Franklin's anecdote about John Thompson, the hatter.

This young friend of Franklin, as the story ran, thought to set up in business for himself. He caused a signboard to be painted, bearing a drawing of a hat and the words, "John Thompson, Hatter, Makes and Sells Hats for Ready Money." One friend thought "hatter" tautologous because of the words following it, so John struck it out. Another objected to "makes," saying the public did not care who made an article it really wished to buy, so that word was also eliminated. At the suggestion of a third John erased "for ready money," because the custom of the community was to sell for cash. A fourth objected to "sells hats," on the ground that John wouldn't be expected to give them away. All that finally remained on the board was Thompson's name and the picture.

If the Secretary of State really believes it Jeffersonian to establish the Federal Government in greater authority by new encroachment on State rights, to regulate from Washington the details of agriculture, industry and commerce, to tell farmers what they shall grow and for how much to sell it, to dictate hours of labor and the terms on which private business shall be conducted, to control by codes the prices manufacturers shall get for their products—if Mr. Hull thinks all this consistent with Thomas Jefferson's principles, he used too many words at William and Mary. He could have made his point more eloquently by displaying a signboard bearing the picture of Jefferson emerging from his grave and holding aloft a banner inscribed with the words "New Deal."

The Post Impressionist

Palestine To Pacific.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

LAST winter there were 59,300 Hitler exiles from Germany scattered over this world of ours, between the Near East and the Far West. This spring there were 63,400.

Last October the League of Nations' Council appointed James G. MacDonald head of a commission to "direct international collaboration," which alone, said the League Assembly, could solve the "economic and social problem" presented by these refugees. This June the High Commissioner's first annual report reached America.

The report will serve as an admirable reminder to those of us who forget other people's wounds as soon as we hear that somebody has sent for a doctor.

* * *

The High Commissioner early inquired of the German government whether there couldn't be some uniformity in the Reich's rules about how much property a prospective emigrant might take away with him—whether civil service pensions would ever be renewed for Hitler exiles who were once pensioners—whether there was any chance for recovery of payments made by such exiles to social insurance funds in Germany. The report reports that these inquiries have not yet been answered.

* * *

One of the exiles' greatest difficulties is their lack of "papers"—passports, identity cards and all the pestiferous yet highly useful paraphernalia without which, in Europe, nobody can travel far or stay long. There are holders of German passports whose passports German consular officers won't renew. There are passportless Germans who are still legally German citizens. There are aliens—chiefly White Russian refugees from the Soviets—who held permits for temporary German residence and whose permits Germany now refuses to extend. And there are German-born "who have been deprived of their German nationality since they left Germany, and have therefore been rendered stateless."

None of these may return to Germany; many are outside the law by remaining, or trying to remain, wherever they happen to be. "The country in which a stateless person is resident when his travel document expires is entitled to grant him a fresh document of identity and travel." The Commission "urged the states concerned to give stateless refugees the same facilities as to residence and employment as are granted to refugees of German nationality, and the High Commissioner asked that no measure should be taken to force these stateless persons out of the country in which they were living, until a decision had been reached on the question of principle. Nevertheless, it has been reported that expulsions from one country to another are frequent."

* * *

Then there are—or, rather, aren't—the work permits. In these hard times, permission to work is not easily granted a foreigner, or even permission for him to become an apprentice. Yet the High Commissioner shows that the refugees as a whole are far from being burdens upon the countries to which they have fled:

"Those who have been permitted to establish a business have brought employment. The relief organizations have spent a substantial sum (in the countries of exile), while the refugees themselves who are not dependent on the relief organizations have spent considerably larger sums."

* * *

And the intellectuals among the exiles? "Numerically, they form an important part of the total emigration. It is estimated that the academic persons displaced are approximately 1,200." There are about 3,000 in the professional group, and 1,500 of the 6,000 students unable to continue thier studies in Germany have left that country.

There is an organization to find work for such refugees as surrendered academic appointments in the Reich. There is an organization for care of the doctors, lawyers, teachers and social workers driven from their German homes. And there is an organization for the students.

* * *

In no group, intellectual or other, has the number decreased, except when death decreased it. We have heard of "returns to Germany." Some there have been, but new arrivals abroad have, apparently, compensated for all returns.

Says the report: "There is now an ordered exodus from Germany, and not a panic flight; but the conditions of admission into the countries adjacent to Germany have been made more severe." Improvements over earlier conditions have indeed been made, but "the funds for relief are being rapidly exhausted. The problem of providing maintenance for the non-Jewish refugees who have no means is, in particular, causing more and more anxiety."

* * *

Although the report believes that the figures must be taken with some reserve, it gives the following table to show the present number and distribution of these exiles:

France	21,000
Palestine	10,000
Poland	6,000
Czechoslovakia	3,500
Holland	3,500
England	2,000
Belgium	2,300
Switzerland	2,500
Scandinavia	2,500
Austria	800
Saar and Luxembourg	1,000
Spain	1,000
Italy	800
U. S. A.	2,500
Other countries	2,000
Total	63,400

* * *

Small wonder that the report concludes with a quotation from a distinguished Christian theologian: "What this stricken world needs most to hear again is that fundamental of Judaism and of Christianity—'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'"

On the Business of Getting Right.

BARGERON.

THE closing hours of Congress were so crowded that it has not been properly recorded that Senator Ellison Smith came back to be as stalwart a supporter as Mr. Roosevelt could possibly desire. Or so the record sayeth. And in so doing the gentleman did about as neat a job of purging one's self of a political sin as one ever saw.

It is too bad Ellison doesn't come up this year, because under the circumstances he would be a particular delight on the stump. He is a political delight always, but should he be up against a campaign this year he would be more than ordinarily good.

• • • •

Ellison's opponent would insist with distended temples and with all the voice that the law schools teach, of course, that Ellison had committed an unpardonable sin; that at a time when the Democratic party under the leadership of a great Democrat was wrestling so well with the Nation's ills, Ellison had sought to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery; that he not only sought to thwart the President's efforts toward the "more abundant life" by opposing the elevation of Prof. Tugwell, but that he successfully blocked a measure so essential to the "more abundant life," the little matter of the agricultural clarification bill, which would have clarified the agricultural commissars into authority to do pretty much anything they desired.

Ah, it is on this last score that Ellison would have the record on his opponent, the old record in black and white, and with which he could shout back that his love for the farmer could not be excelled anywhere.

• • • •

It was not his judgment, Ellison could say, that the clarification bill would have helped the farmer at all, but he, Ellison, was not one to stand on his own judgment alone. Perhaps wiser counsels than he, Ellison could contend, wanted the clarification bill; so he, rather than take any possible chance of doing the farmer wrong, came around to the support of it.

That is what the record shows. You can't get around it. Ellison, in those hectic closing hours, came to be no longer the obstacle to the Administration in the matter of this bill, but the sponsor of it instead.

• • • •

What Ellison did, of course, in the closing hours was to offer the agricultural amendments as amendments to a pending bill, and what a pending bill it was. It was, if I am not mistaken, the Lemke-Frazier bill virtually canceling the farmer's mortgage indebtedness.

Senator Byrd, who along with Ellison had blocked the agricultural amendments throughout the session, and rightly so, objected to Ellison's great gesture. But that can't detract from Ellison's 100 per cent loyalty to the Administration. The record is there that he offered these amendments. What it does not show is that Ellison knew he would be blocked—but the record, there she is.

• • • •

What would have been even funnier than Ellison's tactics all through the latter days of the session, his repeated somersaults to get out of the hole he considered he was in, would have been for the amendments to have been voted upon as a rider to the Lemke-Frazier bill. It is generally assumed that Mr. Roosevelt will veto that bill or let it die with a pocket veto.

With the agricultural amendments tacked onto it how clear Ellison's record would have been. Why, he would have been in the light of supporting the amendments and having the President veto them.

The only thing I don't understand about Ellison's thinking is that this record he has written will not be in point until 1938, when he faces the voters again. Until then the Administration is what he must worry about. And Mr. Roosevelt will hardly be guided by what the record shows, knowing what happened underneath.

Teacher in Sunday School Completes Terms of 68 Years

Winchester, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—Miss Lona A. Kern, 85, a member of a local family steeped in the principles of Methodism for generations, has completed 68 years' service as a Sunday school teacher in Market Street Methodist Church here.

Miss Kern, who celebrated her birthday yesterday, is the last survivor of the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nimrod Kern. She was elected a teacher in Market Street Church in 1865, and was one of the founders of the Winchester branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unoin, of which she has been president, secretary and treasurer.

Miss Kern's activities are not limited to religious study. She is a student of political economy and has great interest in current affairs.

The National Gallery

ELWOOD STREET, director of public welfare, District of Columbia. Worked his way through Western Reserve University covering campus stories for Cleveland newspapers. Successfully directed Community Chests of Cleveland, Louisville, and St. Louis until he organized local group in 1928. His secret of his youthful appearance is that no matter how busy he gets, he never seems in a rush. Dispensed $20,000,000 during his Community Chest days. Will distribute $15,000,000 more in his present relief and welfare work. His slogan: "Humanity, economy and efficiency." Stocky, business-like, he has sandy hair and a reddish mustache. Keen, stubborn, professorish, he likes giving interviews, dislakes speeches, and chases around with a camera. It's his hobby.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

If You Distrust Both Partners, Distrust the Firm

By Robert Quillen

It is an easy matter to deal with a card cheat who has a sense of shame. Catch and expose him and he accepts the role of outcast.

But if he has no sense of shame, or has no respect for the rules, neither scorn nor denunciation affects him. Your bad opinion leaves him unmoved, for he doesn't think ill of himself.

What is true of an individual is doubly true of a nation, for a nation's standard of honor is notoriously and invariably lower than the standard of its individual citizens.

Thus by examining the ethical faults of a race, you may be able to foresee and understand the greater faults of the nation.

In France the law has little regard for justice. An innocent man may remain in jail six months before he is given opportunity to establish his innocence.

And since a guilty man who has money can, and usually does, remain at liberty while his trial is postponed year after year, until the witnesses dies or the wrong is forgotten, the guilty are respected as much as the innocent, and nobody remembers or cares which is which.

Moreover, tax dodging is so universal and respectable that one who pays all he should is regarded as a simpleton.

They are not without honor, but they do not accept our standards. As American adults feel free to speak untruthfully to children, so the Japanese see no wrong in lying to an inferior. And all races not Oriental are regarded as inferiors.

When a Japanese breaks his word or his contract, he argues that his honor was pledged under certain conditions and he has the ethical right to change as conditions do.

Knowing these things to be true, it is easier to understand the apparent dishonor of France and Japan. One refuses to pay its debts and the other violates treaties, yet they feel neither shame nor guilt for they aren't playing the game by our rules.

Peery Is Host To Fleet's Chief On Capital Visit

Vice Admiral Campbell and Aids Guests at Mansion Dinner.

Richmond, June 26 (AP). — Vice Admiral E. H. Campbell left his scouting fleet in Hampton Roads today and came to the State capital by automobile to pay his respects to Virginia, and formally to return Gov. Peery's recent welcoming visit to the fleet.

The Admiral and the Governor exchanged courtesies in the executive suite and then the party was entertained at a luncheon at the Governor's mansion.

Alighting airily from a marine-chauffeured sedan at the south portico of the capitol, Admiral Campbell and his party were met by Col. John W. Williams, Commander Dave Satterfield, and Lieut. W. H. Cardwell, of the Governor's staff, and escorted to the Governor's office.

Looking up at his host, and then at the group assembled in the Governor's office, Admiral Campbell said:

"Here, am I the only bald-headed man to have his picture taken?"

At the luncheon were the Admiral and his party, the Governor and his party, Mrs. Peery, Miss Nancy Peery, the Governor's daughter, and other relatives and friends of the family.

The Admiral returned to the fleet late today, but will be in Richmond next Wednesday to participate in the capital's celebration of the Fourth of July.

Dying Words in Diary.

Frankfort, Ind. (U.P.).—Faithful to his diary which he had kept for 62 years, David D. Cohee, 80, Clinton County native, scribbled his last entry a few minutes before he died here recently.

'30' Is Sounded For 'Pete' Daily, Editor, Writer

A victim of tuberculosis, believed traceable to service in France during the World War, Francis P. Daily, 42, widely known Washington newspaperman, died yesterday at a veterans' hospital in Oteen, N. C.

Mr. Daily, better known to his friends as (Pete) had been ill several months and about six weeks ago, while in the employ of The Washington Herald, he was removed to the North Carolina hospital.

Born in Philadelphia, Mr. Daily came to Washington with his parents when 8 years old, and has lived here since. In 1911 he married Miss Clarita Jackson, of Washington, who with their daughter, Miss Frances Downer Daily, survives him. During his illness the widow and daughter have been living in Woodbury, N. J.

After finishing his education in the schools of Washington Mr. Daily began his newspaper career with the Washington Star, as space writer in the sports department. He left the Star in 1910 and alternated for several years between the Times and the Herald in various capacities. He was city editor of the Herald in 1914.

In more recent years he was employed by The Post, serving at various times as assistant city editor, sports writer and copy editor, and for a time was with the United States Daily. His last newspaper connection here was with the Herald as copy editor.

When the United States entered the World War Mr. Daily enlisted in the Twenty-eighth Division and served a year in France as a noncommissioned officer. After his discharge he resumed newspaper work in Washington.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed yesterday, but it was stated the body would be taken to Philadelphia for interment in Westminster Cemetery.

No End of Books

THEO. HALL.

IN THE whole sovereign State of Mississippi, during the past eight years, Simon & Schuster have sold just three books—value, $3.06. . . . H. G. Wells has nearly finished writing the story of his life. MacMillan expects to receive the manuscript by July 1, and will publish the book in October under the title of "An Experiment in Autobiography." A lengthy experiment it is, running to about 250,000 words. If you have thought Wells' novels rather impersonal, you are due for a surprise here. His autobiography is to be very intimate, indeed. A great number of letters is included, many illustrated by Wells' own pen. Thirty half-tones are to round out the illustrations . . . The movie rights to Margaret Ayer Barnes' novel, "Within This Present" (Houghton Mifflin), have been bought by Universal Pictures, Inc. . . . Frances Noyes Hart, now living in California, has sent Doubleday-Doran the manuscript of her new mystery romance, "The Crooked Lane." The story, somewhat cut, is now running in the Ladies' Home Journal. It's setting is Washington.

Shakespeare's comments on the gentle sport of automobiling have just been collected by the Golden Book Magazine in its July issue. You're skeptical? Well, then, here they are with references:

A book to be called "Off With Their Heads!" will reproduce 35 of these and give Miss Bacon's mental impressions while doing her subjects. Among those appearing are President Roosevelt, Mayor La Guardia, Rexford Tugwell, Sinclair Lewis, Gen. Johnson and Heywood Broun. McBride will publish the book in the fall. • • • Admiral Henry A. When T. S. Stribling was a boy in Tennessee and working at one job or another, he used to save up his money until he amassed $50. Then he would go to New York, stay at a cheap hotel for 25 cents a day and find good 15-cent meals. Two weeks or more of happy rambling followed. When funds got low he would buy a few presents for the family, to show that he'd been in New York, and return home to start saving all over again. As a result, Mr. Stribling knows New York far better than many New Yorkers. • • • Booth Tarkington is working on a novel about Little Orvie, a small boy on the order of Penrod who has already made several appearances in the Saturday Evening Post. • • • Herbert Agar, winner of the Pulitzer prize for his study of the Presidents, "The People's Choice" (Houghton Mifflin), arrived in this country recently after an absence of six years. The first thing he did was to buy a Ford, with the purpose of driving about the country and stopping at tourist camps, farmhouses and small hotels. If he considers his observations sufficiently pointed and interesting, he will pause somewhere at the end of eight months and spend the next four in doing a book on the present state of the Nation.

Two hot dogs! A special pair!
Make 'em good and ask no question!
They're for the country's First Digestion!

The Cook.
(Addressing the Frankfurters.)

Franks and rolls for Franklin! Hey!
Dogs, do your duty to the U. S. A.!
Who'll be the first to volunteer?
Gimme the answer loud and clear!

First Dog.
(To a Companion.)

Cheer up, brother, don't you cry!
Ours is a glorious death to die;
Bear in mind as we broil and bake
We meet death for our country's sake!

Second Dog.

Baloney! That philosophy
Only applies to you, not me;
My life here is a fleeting one—
I'm not dying for anyone!

First Dog.

Where's your pride? Oh, can't you see
We will go down in history:
Two hot dogs who elected to

Second Dog.

Not for me is an end like that—
Besides I am not a Democrat;
You volunteer; as for me, no thanks!

First Dog.

For shame! Where is your spirit, man?
What if you are Re-pub-li-can?
The New Deal clearly says we should
Drop politics for the common good!

Second Dog.
(Weakening as the Cook Whistles "The Star-Spangled Banner.")

My opposition seems to melt—
Prepare me for a Roosevelt!
I do not like it very well
But in a crisis, what the hell!

Both Dogs.
(To the Cook.)

Turn on the heat! It's all okay!
We perish for the U. S. A.!
Bring on the fork! Apply the knife!
Three cheers for the Abundant Life!

(The dogs, chins up, march resolutely to the grill, salute the President and die as all patriotic hot dogs should under the circumstances.)

President Roosevelt at New London for the boat race must have been impressed by the amazing improvement in one of the country's outstanding heavy goods industries: that of maneuvering 260-foot steel yachts into a favorable position safely.

Prof. Billy Phelps emerges from the orgy of college reunion oratory with a batting average of 1,000 per cent as usual. He made the presentation of honorary degrees a treat rather than an ordeal. Where, for instance, was there a better crack than this in giving a Yale degree to the boyish James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, "During his entire career he made but one mistake, and that is about to be rectified now?"

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Dornford Yates.

This man has written many stories, only one of which is dull; this exception is called "The Stolen March" and is a venture into a different field, where mules talk in the most boresome manner. Every other book by him I have found full of thrills and full of fun. He is the nearest approach to the Anthony Hope, who wrote "The Prisoner of Zenda" of all the writers who have endeavored to imitate that gorgeous narrative.

Dornford Yates is the pen name of the Englishman, Capt. Cecil William Mercer. He was born in 1885, was educated at Harrow and at University College, Oxford, where he was president of the undergraduate dramatic society. He became a barrister, took part in the war in Egypt and in Salonica, saw much active service and was made captain in 1918. He was married in 1919 to an American.

He first attractived attention in the world of letters by a story called "Jonah and Co.," which has an irresistible brand of humor and an originality all its own.

Since then he has written thrilling tales of impossible adventures at mythical castles in some Zenda-like country in Central Europe; there is always a surpassingly beautiful heroine, and usually two young Englishmen who do not know the sensation of fear, who are as chivalrous as they are brave; there is always one damnable villain, full of resource and empty of scruples, who is foiled only after long and desperate adventures, where you and I would have no luck at all. Then at the close one of the young Englishmen either marries or is about to marry the beautiful damsel.

You will scarcely find in these days any novels more full of thrills than these three by Dornford Yates, called "Blind Corner" and "Blood Royal and "Storm Music." Any or all of these will make you forget everything else as you follow the fortunes of the hero and heroine.

A novel by him that combines terrific excitement with side-splitting mirth is "Adele and Co.," where a charming group of young married English people get into difficulties with horrible scoundrels in France. It is as laughable as it is engrossing.

Dornford Yates is an important addition to the list of writers who help us to forget ourselves.

Real Security Will Be Asked In RFC Loans

Banks Should Finance Industry's New Capital Needs, Says Jones.

Contending that the industry of the Nation should be financed by the banks, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, in a radio address last night told the country that his agency would make industrial loans under the recent act of Congress only when the borrower can offer adequate security and promise a reasonable program of repayment.

Jones warned, however, that while industries should first turn to their banks for financial assistance, his agency stood ready to make its resources available to deserving borrowers until the banks loosen up their credit policies.

He also urged that industries seeking funds attempt to get their local banks to participate along with the RFC in making loans to stimulate employment. Jones pointed out that under the Glass act banks may now rediscount with the Federal Reserve banks notes for industrial loans with maturities up to five years.

Huge Credit Reservoir.

The RFC chairman estimated that if the banks, Federal Reserve banks and RFC cooperate in making advances to industry needing new capital a credit reservoir of between $600,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 would be available to take care of the situation.

Jones also warned depositors in closed banks not to expect any benefit from the provision inserted in the act extending for another year the temporary Federal deposit insurance fund. This provision directed the RFC to make loans on appraisals of the assets of closed banks in anticipation of an orderly liquidation over a period of years rather than on a basis of forced sale in a period of business depression.

He asserted that "this is exactly what we have been doing for a good many months and while we may be able to increase loans as recovery goes on, the law still requires that we not lend more than the reasonable liquidating value of the collateral over a period of years." Thus, he said, "this new act gives us no additional authority in this respect" and "is not as promising as some of those interested may have been led to believe."

Regulations Due Today.

Meanwhile the governors and chairmen of the Federal Reserve Banks completed their two-day session here with the Federal Reserve Board at which regulations were formulated to govern industrial loans under the Glass act. These regulations will be made public today.

At the conclusion of yesterday's meeting Gov. Eugene Black of the Federal Reserve Board announced that each Federal Reserve Bank reported progress in setting up an organization to make industrial loans and in selecting an advisory committee of industrialists to help in this work.

"The reserve banks reported that they are now ready to receive applications for working capital loans from industrial concerns," Gov. Black explained.

Movie of Barbary Coast Suspended

Production Plans Cancelle for the Present.

Hollywood, June 26 (AP).—Samuel Goldwyn, film producer, announced today his half-million dollar production of "Barbary Coast" has been postponed indefinitely.

Herbert Asbury's informal history of San Francisco's gaudy, "tough" colony of yore is "not a child's story," Goldwyn said, and he has decided not to alter it to fit present demands. Accordingly, he is disbanding the cast, including Anna Sten and Gray Cooper, and canceling production plans for the present.

In the temporary abandonment, Goldwyn said he was acting on his own initiative and as his own censor.

"Every censor board official in the industry and out of it," he said, "to whom the story was unofficially submitted, gave it emphatic and unqualified approval."

$200,000 Harvest is Being Garnered on Municipal Gardens

Post Staff Photos.

Efficient gardeners are making profitable use of the District's 800 subsistence garden plots. They have been hard at work since early spring, and now they are reaping their reward. Rose Marie King is shown examining some of the tomatoes in one plot, and Charles Galloway, superintendent of the North Kingman tract, exhibits a head of lettuce.

800 Families From Relief Rolls Are Given Work Producing Own Food in Novel Project Undertaken by FERA Unit.

Located in six separate tracts, occupying more than 100 acres of soil, the gardens will furnish the gardeners with almost $200,000 worth of vegetables before late autumn frosts.

Under the direction of the Federal Commodity Division of the FERA, the city-bred tillers of the soil have been hard at work since early spring.

Harvesting Begins.

Already the gardeners are harvesting lettuce, radishes, onions, cabbage, beans and kale. In another month they will begin to reap corn, lima beans, yams, carrots, beets and large cabbages. When Indian summer comes there will be more golden corn and Irish potatoes.

Each garden plot is 50 by 100 feet, and accomplishes a two-fold purpose. It furnishes food. It further gives shape and purpose to lives rendered idle by the depression.

"How this is done one doesn't need to be a psychologist to understand," observes King, an energetic, mild-mannered man, who was himself caught in the maelstrom of unemployment.

There's another factor, too. Health. Think of what the sun, the wind and the scent of green things growing do for the unfortunate who has found himself on relief rolls for so long. Health. Mental and physical health."

Location of Plots.

Two large plots, covering 65 acres, are in the southeast, between the District Jail and Gallinger Hospital, west of the Anacostia River. One, to the north, is for colored persons, and one, to the south, for white. A sewer-gap separates them, and the tracts are divided equally.

A third tract, of 20 acres, is on Tunlaw road northwest. It is for white families. In the 4800 block of Conduit road northwest is a 10-acre plot for colored gardeners, and in the southwest, between One-and-a-Half, Q and R streets, is a 10-acre tract for colored. A strip along Canal street, quite small, is for white gardeners.

On the eastern bank of the Anacostia is Rorer Farm, which is a community garden, with no individual plots. It was salvaged from a muddy flat and made tillable by the volunteer labor of many jobless, under the direction of a supervisor who lives on the flat. Tumbleweed has been replaced by corn and potatoes, and muck by radishes and beets. Its produce will be stored for distribution among the needy of the city during the winter.

Each of the six tracts has for its supervisor an elderly man, who is an expert on farming. The supervisors are, in fact, retired farmers driven by the slump to the relief rolls.

Supervisor Aids.

"This is the way to plant that, son," they tell their charges. "That is the way to make those beets grow larger, and juicier and tenderer."

These wily "old men of the soil" are the fatherly instructors of the families who spend approximately ten hours a week on their gardens.

The favorite time for working is between 4:30 and 6 p. m. The wife and children follow the father, and plows sometimes are pressed into use. Friendships develop over a hoe and spade. In many ways the District subsistance gardens are similar to the French village, where the farmers work adjoining farms, and return to the village to dance and sing far into the night.

Each garden is expected to produce the equivalent of $225 to $250 worth of produce this year.

"We won't have anyone on our gardens who can't produce this reasonable amount," King asserts. "Of course, whatever a family produces belongs to that family, with no tribute whatever demanded. Contributions of foodstuffs for less fortunate individuals who've had no chance to store it away will be welcomed, however."

Russian Admiral Denies War Is Impending With Japanese

Norfolk, June 26 (Spl.).—There will be no war between Russia and Japan.

This is the opinion of Rear Admiral Paul Y. Oras, naval attache of the Russian Legation in Washington, who today inspected the Norfolk naval base and ships of the scouting fleet. "It requires two to make a fight," Admiral Oras said, "and Russia is too busy building up her industry and cultural resources to start fighting anybody.

"We know that the statesmen and leaders of the Japanese people are opposed to war.

Knights of Pythias Rally at Frederick

Honor Reno S. Harp, Who Is to Get High Office.

Frederick, Md., June 26 (Spl.).—A Knights of Pythias rally, attended by more than 200 members from Martinsburg, W. Va.; Gaithersburg, Md.; Annapolis, Md.; Waynesboro, Pa., and other places, was held under the auspices of Mountain City lodge last night in honor of Reno S. Harp, this city, supreme vice chancellor, who in August will be elevated to supreme chancellor, the highest office in the order.

A large class of candidates, including Dr. Charles H. Conley, this city, one of the four candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Maryland, was given the rank of page by the local lodge degree team, J. Clark Devilbiss, captain. William Sylvestor, Pittsburgh, supreme representative from Pennsylvania, in an address, referred to the approaching elevation of Mr. Harp and predicted a revival of Pythian interest and an enrollment of 300,000 new members during his administration.

A. Elwood Martak, Baltimore, grand keeper of records and seal, took part in the initiation. Selections were rendered by a quartet composed of H. W. Hipsley, director; T. J. Johnson, J. N. Stuckey and F. A. Nicodemus, of the Martinsburg lodge. A reception followed the degree work.

Potato Prices May Hit $2.50

Government to Commence Buying to Relieve Farm Sections.

Norfolk, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—A material improvement in the price of potatoes was registered today over last week's average, due to two potent factors, and a figure of $2 or $2.25, perhaps $2.50, is expected within a few days.

The first was that when the price dropped to $1.40 a barrel, growers in the Norfolk area quit digging and the threatened surplus was somewhat reduced.

A major fact, however, was the announcement from Washington that the Federal Emergency Relief Administration would go into the market the latter part of this week and begin buying "at cost of production." The Federal Government is expected to take at least 2,000 carloads from the Carolina, Virginia and Maryland fields in proportion to estimates of the yield.

Estimates of the cost of production in the Norfolk area run from $2 to $2.10 a barrel f. o. b. shipping point, and it is regarded as probable that the FERA will pay at least $2 a barrel.

In Norfolk today potatoes were quoted at $1.75 and $1.85 per barrel, and on Eastern Shore a minimum of $1.85.

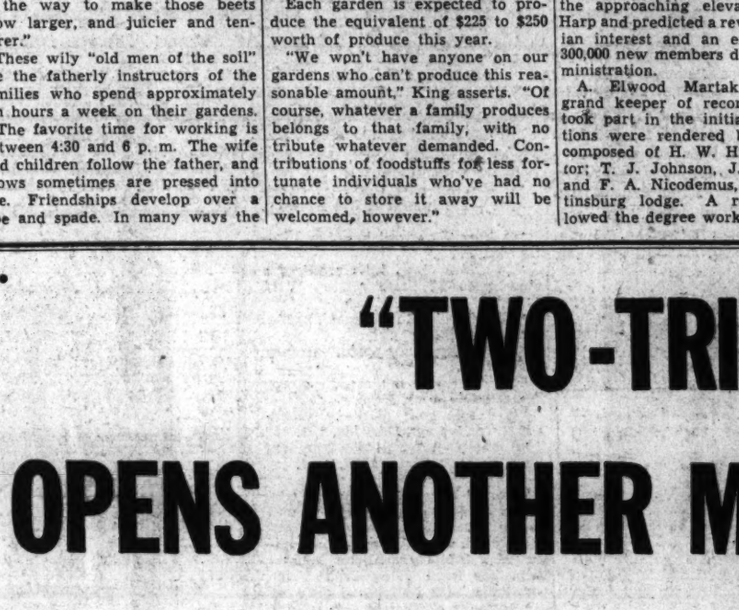
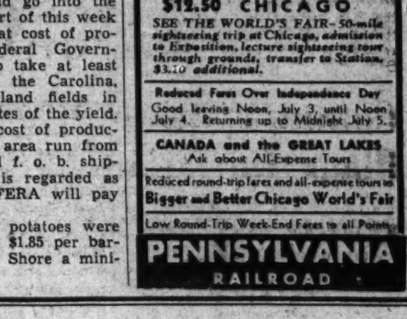
"TWO-TRIP" TEST

OPENS ANOTHER MOTORIST'S EYES!

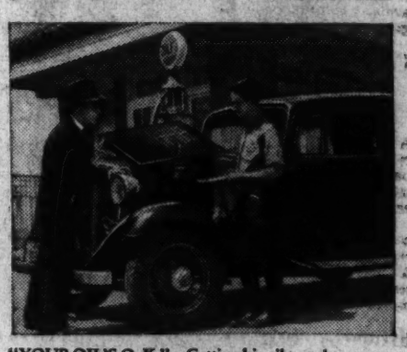


MONTREAL
"FIRST TRIP (Boston to Montreal)—using a well-known 25¢ oil, I had to add a quart at Chestertown, 293 miles from Boston"
"SECOND TRIP (over same route)—using Gulf-lube I went the whole distance, 450 miles, before a quart was needed"
CHESTERTOWN
BOSTON

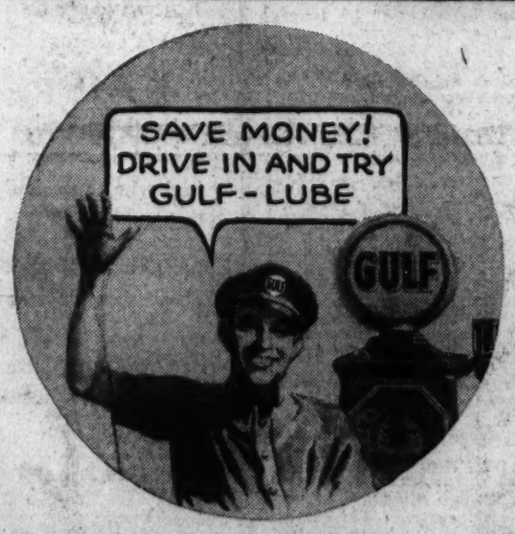
MR. J. P. COCHRANE, Chevrolet owner, 177 Oliver Road, Waban, Mass. Read how Gulf-lube cut his oil costs!



SCENE OF THE TAKE-OFF—State House, Boston. With the first oil tested, Mr. Cochrane had to add a quart at Chestertown, New York—293 miles from here.



"YOUR OIL'S O. K."—Getting his oil tested en route, Gulf-lube took Mr. Cochrane the whole distance between Montreal and Boston before a quart was needed —450 miles.



Want to cut your oil costs? Want to get better lubrication and use less oil between fillings? Let Mr. Cochrane tell you how to do it!

"I USED TO THINK that all 25c* motor oils were about alike," says Mr. J. P. Cochrane, of Waban, Mass. "But I've changed my thinking!"

"Recently, I drove my car from Boston to Montreal—using a well-known 25c* oil. And at Chestertown, New York, I had to add a quart—293 miles from Boston.

"Later I had occasion to cover the same route—and this time I used Gulf-lube. It took me the entire distance between Montreal and Boston (450 miles)—157 miles farther than the oil I had previously used—before a quart was consumed."

Mr. Cochrane is one of the thousands of car owners who have found that Gulf-lube cuts oil costs. Start saving. Switch to Gulf-lube—the oil that went 28½% more miles per quart than 3 other famous 25c* oils in AAA tests. Drive to a Gulf station, drain worn oil, refill with Gulf-lube—and you'll burn less oil. Check up and see! *Plus tax.

New oil test detects motor dirt!

Gulf has a new oil test that instantly shows whether or not your oil is dangerously dirty! No cost. No obligation. Ask about it. At all Gulf Stations.

Counties Drop Plans for Fair

Winchester and Frederick Citizens Disagree on State Proposal.

Winchester, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—At a mass meeting of Winchester and Frederick County citizens here yesterday, it was voted to table the matter of conducting an agricultural fair this year.

Although the Virginia Association of Fairs has granted dates for the fair here, the citizens could not come to an agreement on operation of a plan laid down by C. B. Ralston, Staunton, secretary of the State organization.

Mr. Ralston offered a proposition whereby he would furnish all premiums for the Future Farmers of America, 4-H Club and Home Demonstration divisions and tents for exhibits provided he was made manager will full authority to act. He also reserved the right to charge an admission, revenue from which was to be used to defray the cost of premiums. Live stock exhibits were to be left to the fair organization.

Division of opinion arose when it was learned Mr. Ralston had not included a live stock division in the fair and did not state the probable admission charge.

Sabbath Breaker Is Fined in W. Va.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 26 (Spl.).—Benn Mann, proprietor of a beer parlor on the Martinsburg-Hedgesville road, near the corporation limits, arrested a week ago by State police on a charge of violating the Old State law which prohibits the operation of such places on the Sabbath, was fined $10 and costs by a justice yesterday.

He pleaded guilty.

Police said they had been called to Mann's place three consecutive Saturday nights because of fights and other disturbances, and they had requested him along with operators of other such establishments to close at midnight Saturdays to avoid such troubles. Mann disregarded the warning, officers said.

Loudoun County Home Agent Reports Busy Quarter Year

Leesburg, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—Ninety-five meetings, with a total attendance of 1,142, were held during April, May and June by Miss Matilda Garner, county home demonstration agent, according to a report given by Miss Garner at the meeting of the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors here yesterday.

The agent spent 50 days in the field and 21 days in the office; 59 adults were visited and 34 4-H club members; 37 office visits were made to the agent and 53 telephone calls. A total of 203 individual letters were written and 33 circular letters prepared, with 892 of the latter distributed. The agent published 17 news articles and items and traveled 2,376 miles.

The agent's work has been conducted with home demonstration clubs in Arcola, Aldie, Pot House, Lucketts, Lovettsville, Waterford, Bluemont, Round Hill and Purcellville; with 4-H clubs in Lincoln, Bluemont, Round Hill, Lucketts, Paeonian Springs, Waterford, Woodburn, Leesburg, Philomont, Carters, Arcola and Ashburn, and with subsistence gardens in Leesburg, Sterling and Ashburn.

Projects which have been stressed both in meetings and by individual visits in the adult work have been refinishing furniture, upholstering furniture, reseating chairs, canning, gardening and poultry improvement. The agent visited 20 poultry growers in April.

In 4-H club work the instructions have been centered around food and health. The 4-H members have put on judging and demonstration contests. Each club has selected winners to take part in county contest day on July 6. The club members are also completing plans to send a representative from each club to the State 4-H camp to begin at Blacksburg July 23.

The board ordered that $125 be paid E. H. Trundle, engineer, for a survey made of the Illsley cottage property last December.

West Virginia Bone Dry Rule Will Be Tested

Youths Brought Legally Acquired Liquor Into State.

Charleston, W. Va., June 26 (Spl.).—The first test of the long observed ruling by Attorney General Homer A. Holt, that West Virginians may bring legally acquired liquor into this State for personal use, is to be made at the next term of the Federal District Court at Huntington.

The test will arise from the arrest of four Charleston youths at Huntington on Federal charges of transporting liquor from Kentucky into West Virginia. Their arrest brings up for the first time since National repeal the question whether persons can bring legally acquired liquor into West Virginia from another State and whether the State prohibition amendment is a "bone dry" instrument.

Judge G. W. McClintic, of Federal District Court, has frequently instructed grand juries that West Virginia is a "bone dry" State and that Federal laws designed to protect dry States are still in effect here.

The defendants in the test case are Gordon Murray, Joe Olian, Ira Taylor and Kermit Hutchinson. They waived preliminary examination before George H. Heffley, Federal court commissioner, at Huntington, and were released under bonds for further action at the September term of district court here.

A test case is also up in the Kanawha County Circuit Court of the constitutionality of the State 3.2 beer law. The suit for $200 was brought by E. D. Martin & Co. of Charleston, beer distributors, against Noble T. Fisher, engaged in the trucking business here. The test arises from alleged failure of Fisher to bring in a load of beer from Pennsylvania in a truck and trailer under a contract with the company.

PWA Loan for Huge Virginia Airport-Terminal Considered

Operating Concern Would Construct Monster Airship.

Richmond, June 26 (Spl.).—Attorney General A. P. Staples is considering a proposal that Virginia apply for Public Works Administration funds with which to construct near Richmond a huge airport and terminal.

The Public Works Administration, it is proposed, would advance $912,000 to purchase the land and develop the airport, which would be leased to an operating company which would be required to construct an all-metal airship at a cost of $1,500,000.

Gov. George C. Peery said the proposal had been submitted to him and that he had passed it on to the attorney general for study. He is not committed in any way to the project, he said.

The site for the proposed airport adjoins Byrd Airport and embraces approximately 900 acres. It is proposed to build a large dock and a hangar for two airships. Radio and meteorological stations are to be set up and other adjuncts to a modern airport installed.

The airport, it is proposed, would be operated for the State by a central management covering the operation of both airships and airplanes.

The Virginia Airship Co. is behind the project. This company claims to be in a position to construct the airship on lines of its own development. A model of the craft has been exhibited here and has received considerable praise.

Fleet Salutes Dead Seaman

Carpenter on Transport Fires Bullet Into His Brain.

Norfolk, Va., June 26 (AP).—All ships of the scouting force in Hampton Roads lowered their flags to halfmast for one hour this afternoon as a parting salute to John Frederick Ray, of Baltimore, carpenter aboard the transport Henderson, who committed suicide today by firing a bullet into his brain.

Ray, who was about 35 years old and had been on duty aboard the Henderson about six months, was last seen alive shortly before 9 a. m., today.

At 9:15 the door was forced open and Ray was found dead on the floor.

$6,000,000 Saving Seen in Schools

W. Va. Superintendent Tells of Economies.

Charleston, W. Va., June 26 (Spl.).—W. W. Trent, State superintendent of schools, told West Virginia County school superintendents and their assistants at a conference here today that the new county unit school system had saved the State $6,000,000 during the first year of its operation.

The new system of distributing State money to school districts on a basis of pupil-teacher load, varying with density of population as shown by attendance, Trent said, led to a reduction of 1,066 elementary school teachers and the schooling of 10,000 more high school pupils with only 124 more teachers. Schools this year cost approximately $19,500,000, he said, as against a former cost of $23,000,000 to $26,000,000.

Interest in Road Denied by Tydings

Says He Owns No Land Along Right of Way.

Baltimore, June 26 (Spl.).—Indignant denials were issued today by United States Senator Millard E. Tydings that he will benefit by the building of the new Philadelphia road along a route to the south of the existing highway.

Senator Tydings declared that he owns no property along the right of way of the new super-highway, and insisted the only land he owns is that upon which his home in Havre de Grace is built.

The charges were made last night at a meeting of residents along the old route, who want that road widened and improved. John Holt Richardson mentioned "powerful political figures" who had been instrumental in having the new route selected, and named the law firm of which Senator Tydings is a member as being interested in the new route.

M-G-M to Have English Plant In Fall, Report

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

On the heels of the elaborate announcement of production plans on this side of the Atlantic for the coming year, made known here yesterday, it became evident from direct Hollywood correspondence that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will embark actively on a pretentious production schedule in England, probably this fall.

One of the accomplishments of David Selznick, production head of M-G-M, on his recent trip abroad was to lay the groundwork for such an activity. A London office for the collection of literary material adaptable to the screen was established during his stay in the British capital, although no move was made in the direction of securing studio space.

There are several reasons divulged by Selznick for producing abroad. Chief among these is said to be a better understanding of what audiences like on the other side. Also, the quota issue will be automatically taken care of, although that is a minor consideration.

New Talent Quest.

It is probable that about three pictures a year will be made in Britain and that supervision of these pictures will be passed around from hand to hand so that Hollywood production heads will have the opportunity of studying closely the demands of the foreign market.

It is not impossible that the "threat" of such sterling productions as "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great" may have had something to do with inspiring the notion of meeting the opposition on its own ground.

Tonight's performance of "The Octoroon," at the Roadside Theater, out on the Rockville Pike about 6 miles from Bethesda, Md., will be the last for several weeks for Ruth Hartrick, leading woman of the company.

Miss Hartrick is leaving immediately after the final curtain for Putney, Vt., where she will appear with the Repertory Theater Associates for two months. She will return to Washington and the melodrama half of the Roadside organization in September.

Frances Brunt, the Dora Sunnyside of "The Octoroon," will assume the leading roles in the forthcoming melodramas. Rehearsals for "Maria Marten, or Murder in the Red Barn" begin immediately.

Dancers in "Bo Girl."

Mary Day and Betty Yoder, of the Lisa Gardner Dance Group, will appear in the Hungarian gypsy dance in the opening act of Balfe's "Bohemian Girl," with the Estelle Wentworth Opera Company, in the third summer festival under the auspices of the community center department, in the National Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument Grounds, tomorrow night at 8:30.

The production, which will be personally directed by Miss Wentworth, will be open to the public with a limited number of "orchestra chairs," available to those who do not wish to sit on the grassy slopes of the Monument Grounds, at a cost per seat of 25 cents.

It will be pleasant news to his many friends in Washington to know that Jack Stahl, former publicity director of the Hotel Willard and last summer assistant manager of the Annapolis Roads Club, is to return to the Roads Club this season as director of advertising and publicity. Jack drops by the desk to say "hello" and that among the improvements planned for the Roads this summer are a new double-decked pier, concentrated floodlight effects and numerous other innovations that will give the entire establishment—one of the most popular in the vicinity of the Capital—an entirely new aspect.

A Notable Cast.

With the announcement of the signing of John Gilbert for the stellar role in "The Captain Hates the Sea," the cast of the Wallace Smith story, being directed by Lewis Milestone at Columbia, is nearing completion.

The roster now includes Gilbert Victor McLaglen, in the role of Schulte, the detective; Fred Keating, as Danny Checkett, the crook; Florence Rice, as Miss Grayson; Leon Errol, as Layton; Alison Skipworth, as Mrs. McGruder; Wynne Gibson, as Mrs. Jeddock; Johnny Wray, as Jeddock; Audre Beranger, as the jeweler, and Luis Alberni, as Gen. Bilboa.

Fred Keating you will remember as the young vaudeville magician who deserted the hocus-pocus of legerdemain for the leading male role in Tallulah Bankhead's production of "Forsaking All Others."

Florence Rice, of course, you will identify as the beautiful daughter of Grantland Rice, the famous sports commentator who first introduced Oxonian treatment to the pages of the press devoted to the competitive enterprises of our foremost athletes.

The Carter Barrons—that would be Carter Tait, sr., "Chic" and Carter Tait, jr., accompanied by a maid—yesterday were en route by motor to Cartersville, Ga., the Barron ancestral home, the first stop on a considerable trek over the State of Georgia to show his progenitors to Carter Tait Barron, jr., just turned 6 months old. The next stop will be Bostwick, Ga., the home of Mrs. Barron, where Carter, jr., will be christened.

While City Manager Barron of the Loew interests in Washington is away on this brief vacation junket, the destinies of Loew's Fox Palace and Columbia theaters will be presided over by old Col. Harry Long, division manager in this territory for Loew's, always a welcome visitor.

Cab's Sister, Blanche.

Blanche Calloway, "Queen of Jazz"—a name she has rightfully earned—and her sensational Harlem Orchestra will be the featured attraction at Chevy Chase Lake tomorrow night, Al Stern and Eddie Carr, managers of the nearby Maryland dance resort, definitely announced last evening.

A blues singer of note, Blanche conducts a floor show as part of her program, having in her aggregation of melody-makers a number of standout attractions in vaudeville.

The band has won wide favor in New York and Northern points, but this is one of the few occasions on which it has been brought to this part of the country.

It comes out as his engagement on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater progresses that for several weeks prior to his arrival in the Capital, fans in distant points bombarded the Fox management with queries seeking confirmation of Joe Penner's local playing dates. They have flocked in from far places ever since the booking began last Friday. The long-distance record to date seems to be held by six residents of Moorefield, W. Va., who arrived in Washington yesterday after having driven 250 miles just to see Joe sell his duck, bounce his hat and twiddle his cigar.

"And we think it was well worth it," they informed the management.

Meteorological Note.

Yes, this must be summer. And to what good use did you put the longest day in the year?

Martinsburg Man Is Jailed by Wife

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 26 (Spl.).—Because he persisted in visiting the home of his wife, against her wishes, Paris Dintemen has been committed to jail.

She charged that he had resumed abode in her home despite court orders, and that he had been drinking and abusing her.

Katherine B. Grimm, recently filing suit for divorce against Jesse Grimm, appealed to the court for an injunction prohibiting him from molesting her or threatening bodily harm. He was directed to permit the wife to remove her personal property from the home.

Petersburg Marker Is Unveiled by D. A. R.

Petersburg, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—The unveiling of the field marker at Oak Hill in Colonial Heights, said to have been the site of La-Fayette's firing on the British occupying Petersburg during the Revolutionary War, was held today.

This marker has been placed by the Col. John Banister Chapter, D. A. R., of Petersburg. Miss Lucy McIlwaine Jones, great-great-granddaughter of Martha Dunn McIlwaine, who lived at Oak Hill, unveiled the marker.

Aquia Revival Under Way.

Aquia, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—A revival mission conducted by the Rev. Ernest Van R. Stires, of All Saints' Church, and the Rev. Harold Peters, of Epiphany Church, both of Richmond, began today and will terminate Friday for members of the Overwharton Parish at the Aquia Episcopal Church.

From Broadway to Hollywood

Another new face from the Broadway stage soon will be seen on the screen in RKO-Radio Pictures. It will be the face of Ada Cavell, strikingly pictured above. Miss Cavell recently arrived in the film capital to inaugurate what it is expected will be a distinguished career in the cinema. At least, the cameraman caught her when she seemed to be feeling happy about it!

Hollywood, June 25.—Anyone seeing Janet Gaynor driving around in her Rolls-Royce would never, never imagine that she could—hold tight, now!—wash dishes. All the same she can, and she did last Friday. And right in a cafe kitchen, too.

JANET GAYNOR

It was during the filming of a scene for her current Fox picture, "Servants' Entrance," in which she plays the role of a poor man's wife. The other actors in the picture kidded her about the dish-washing scene, telling her she couldn't do it.

"All right, I'll show you," she retorted. And when those scenes came along, she insisted on walking over to the cafe, and doing the thing scientifically, while the cameras turned.

Will Rogers, Helen Twelvetrees and Evelyn Venable were in the cafe, eating, and, as there were six takes of the picture, she washed dishes for them all.

"SAILOR, BEWARE," A. E. Coebran offers the National Theater Players in its comedy of navy life at sea, with Vernon Nicholas and Charles Robinson. Directed by John McKee. Scenes designed and painted by Charles Squires. Entered Monday night (fourth week) as W. A. Whitney.

Breaking all records hung up by the several vintages of National Theater Players, "Sailor, Beware" goes into its fourth week of presenting what Washington wants in the way of snappy summer entertainment.

All the city by this time knows what's what and who's who in this nautical farce, and further expostulation is unnecessary except to add that the "what" and the "who" are still scoring the same success as four weeks ago, and there seems to be no end in sight, despite the management's avowed statement that this is the "last week."

Roy Roberts and Ruth Abbott still bear the brunt of the conflict of desires, with Freddie Sherman, Raymond Bramley, Romaine Callender, Burke Clarke, Adelaide Hibbard, Mary Loane, and a quota from local amateur circles carrying on.

Capital Elite Visit Shores of Nantucket

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Nantucket Island, that delightful spot off the Coast of Massachusetts which was once a famous whaling center, now begins to abound with smart summer visitors, after resting peacefully through the winter.

Yesterday Mrs. William Stanley McClintic, wife of Capt. McClintic, U. S. N., left Washington with her young son, Stephen, to spend the summer at Nantucket, where for many years she has had a home which her mother and grandmother occupied before her. Capt. and Mrs. McClintic have been making their home on Wyoming avenue in Washington for the last two years.

Capt. McClintic will command the U. S. S. Indianapolis after July 1. Mrs. McClintic plans to make her home in Annapolis next winter while Capt. McClintic is on sea duty.

Hagners to Race Yacht.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Hagner, who have spent most of the winter in Warrenton, Va., where they have a country place, have also gone to Nantucket to open their summer home, the old William Barnes place, for the season. With them is their small daughter Caroline. During the season Mr. and Mrs. Hagner will race their yacht, the Thoroughbred, in the several regattas sponsored by the Nantucket Yacht Club, and will also entertain aboard the yacht.

In August Col. and Mrs. Spencer Cosby will open the house they have taken for the remainder of the season.

Senator Walsh a Visitor.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Norment, jr., with their children, Polly and Clarence, are established in their summer home for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baldwin have reopened their attractive cottage, Crossways, where they will spend the summer.

Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, visited Nantucket to attend the annual encampment of the Spanish-American war veterans of the Bay State early this week. Two U. S. destroyers were anchored in the outer entrance to the harbor channel to welcome the veterans to the island, and to fire a welcoming salute to the men who volunteered their services in the war.

White House Party Honors Doctor Lopez

Roosevelt Gives Luncheon for President-Elect of Colombia.

The President, who returned to the Capital yesterday morning from his home in Hyde Park, N. Y., for several days of work before going to Annapolis, Md., where he will board the U. S. S. Houston for his trip to Hawaii via the Panama Canal, entertained at luncheon yesterday in honor of the President-elect of Colombia, Dr. Alfonso Lopez.

The guests were the Minister of Colombia, Senor Dr. Don Fabio Lozano; Mr. Antonio Izquierdo, Mr. Alberto Lleras Camargo, Mr. Jose Saenz, Capt. Roberto Ancizar, the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull; the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr.; the Attorney General, Mr. Homer S. Cummings; the Postmaster General, Mr. James A. Farley; the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold Ickes; the Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Henry A. Dead Horse Is Removed; Lo—a Charming Garden

Butchers Took Away a Tremendous Tree Stump, Then After Hard Work and Applied Intelligence Miss Hendricks Had Beauty in Back Yard.

By Helen Fetter Cook.

IF YOU have a stubborn tree-stump or a dead horse in your back yard, ask Genevieve Hendricks what to do about it. She knows. This young Washington interior decorator, whose professional work has attracted National attention, found both these things in the back yard of 1747 K street northwest when she bought that quaint little red brick house for her studio eight years ago.

She had anticipated piles of tin-cans and other trash which she found in a 5-foot deep layer over this particular back yard. But she was surprised and somewhat disconcerted to find a dead horse. She was relieved, too, for the horse had been dead some time and finding him solved a problem which had puzzled her nose. Her first speedy step was to call the dead animal wagon.

Once the horse was out of the way, the next problem was the tree-stump. It was huge, said to be the stump of the largest oak that ever dropped acorns on Washington soil. Its sprawling roots dug tenacious fingers deep into the earth.

Miss Hendricks admits this gave her considerable thought. After bothering her fluffy blonde head over it for some time she telephoned several blasting concerns for estimates. They all ran into considerable money. She was spending a lot as it was rejuvenating the house and had little to put into fixing the garden. Suddenly a real idea flashed. Butchers like tree-stumps—especially grand big oak ones! She'd advertise. The ad read something like this:

"Anyone who can use big oak tree-stump may have it if he will dig it up and cart it away."

Eight butchers answered next day. Two who got there first, simultaneously, split the stump between them and, as far as Miss Hendricks was concerned, that was that.

Indifferent Earth.

Rejuvenating a back yard into a garden in a section "gone commercial" is a very different problem from building a garden out where gardens naturally grow, in suburbs and purely residential districts. Now that Miss Hendricks had, after five days' concentrated work, cleared out the debris and found her actual ground about 20 by 30 feet in size, she discovered the earth hard, unfertile, completely indifferent to grass seed. Also, the sun only struck the garden obliquely, slanting in on it between the shoulderblades of tall brick buildings on either side and through the lacy tops of young poplar trees outside the fence on the north end.

She recalled fascinating old French and Spanish gardens she had seen on some of her 10 trips abroad and—went gravel. She tucked wandering patterns of blue-gray flagged walks into the midst of warm cream crunchable gravel. She painted light arches on severe dark walls at either side to relieve the gloom. At the back, near the trees, she covered the rickety fence with light screen-arrangement of tall shutters she had salvaged from an old house being destroyed. In the center rear she inserted a graceful doorway with beautiful fan-light top decorated with garlands of painted rosebuds. This also had been salvaged at a very low figure.

Valuable Odds and Ends.

Another time, in the debris of still another collapsed mansion, she spied a heavy, granite sea-shell, which she bought for a song and had partly sunk beneath the arched doorway. It made a delightful bird bath.

At the other end of the garden, near the former kitchen, which Miss Hendricks paneled in oak and where fireplace and Dutch oven have original equipment, one steps from a gingham-curtained door onto a stone terrace abut six feet wide. A grilled Spanish gate, part of a once gorgeous house of the neighborhood, gives majestic entrance to the garden proper. Here other pieces from once beautiful homes, including pink marble columns 'n Grant ...w near the Capitol and a pompous gold crown from a gate-post of the old British Embassy at Connecticut avenue and N streets, add unique values to this individual garden.

All her furniture follows the Latin motive suggested in the gravel. Table, elaborate bench, chairs, all are painted ironwork. Each piece is a reproduction of a famous piece made in earlier days. All are fashioned by an expert American iron craftsman in Virginia.

Flowers in this garden include wax begonias, petunias, geraniums in gay earthenware pots sunk by the pink marble column borders of the casual path. Laurel, rhododendron and the "Tree of Heaven"—sumach—bring freshness, color and coolness to the garden.

"I almost hate to leave it to go to Mexico next month," laughed Miss Hendricks. "I'm crazy to go though. It will be my first trip there. However, I've been in every State in this country except Florida and lived much abroad. I hope to sail July 4 and be gone several weeks."

PILLAR TO POST

No Burglars Wanted.

THE TWO horns of a dilemma were presented to directors of the National Women's Country Club when they had to choose between giving their recent treasure show the widest publicity or issuing guarded understatements of the nature of the exhibit.

It was a great temptation to let the public know what they really might expect to see, because the club could use the money that would have been sure to have come their way—that way.

• • • •

But while publicity would have attracted the customers, it might also have caught the eyes of robbers. As it was, the women running the show had the jitters all afternoon, fearful that the treasures entrusted to their care—jewelry from royal collections, silver hundreds of years old, inscribed photographs of famous people, historical documents and letters, native costumes—might come to harm.

Never before under one roof, outside of a public museum, in Washington or its environs, has there been a similar collection of priceless objects. Nearly every country was represented by loaned articles from the embassies and legations. And those who had not contributed were represented by treasures from the private collections of the president of the club, Mrs. Walter H. Tuckerman.

• • • •

Mrs. Tuckerman contributed an old enameled decoration awarded her by the Imperial Russian Red Cross and some signed photographs of the Grand Duchess Kira, who has visited her daughter, Nora, here, and another friend Serge Romanovsky, Duke of Leuchtenberg.

• • • •

When Mrs. Tuckerman was Miss Edith Abercrombie Miller she visited St. Petersburg and Moscow during the reign of the Czar when those cities were most brilliant. She has traveled in many other countries since, and her collection of curios is a marvel.

• • • •

Perhaps the most extraordinary object in the exhibit was a pewter platter belonging to Mrs. Mark L. Bristol that is estimated to be 1,000 years old and came to her through the Samaritan Society that is said to have had its origin in ancient times. Another brass platter came through the Knights of St. John, another very old organization.

• • • •

The Polish Ambassador sent wonderful sashes that had been worn by Polish noblemen of the early Eighteenth Century, and some native costumes beautifully embroidered in colors and in silver. The daughter of the Minister from Portugal presided over a table loaded with fantastically old silver, and Senora de Alfaro had a gorgeous collection of Panamanian jewelry. The wife of the Minister from the Union of South Africa, Mrs. Close, had beautiful pictures to show, together with some old jewelry and unusual native shawls.

• • • •

Belgium contributed signed pictures of the late King Albert. Mme. Veverka, of Czechoslovakia, gave a bronze bust of the first President, Masaryk. There was a Turkish bride's box of beautifully wrought silver, a French embroidered bag 300 years old, and loads of other things that would have made a grand haul for a discriminating burglar.

Impartial Young Man.

WILLIAM (Sparky) Sparkes on his trip around the world is sending postcards impartially to all his girl friends in Washington, Carolyn Aitchison, Carolyn Bell, jr., Bernice Preston, Alice Blanchard, Ann Miller, and Jean Crampton have been the recipients.

• • • •

Maybe when Sparky reaches some romantic place like Waikiki Beach he will break down and write a letter to the girl he likes best.

PWA Typist Young Woman Of Versatility

Miss Lee Wallace Is Also Tennis Pro, Musician, Painter, Designer.

THE PWA lists her as technical stenographer, but Miss Lee Wallace is, among other things, tennis pro, musician, potter, painter, leatherworker and designer of her own clothes.

All this versatility keeps her busy, too busy, she says. "I do so much I just manage to cheat the undertaker half the time. There's no profit in that, you know."

She turns all her talents to some account, a few for financial profit, but most of them to please her friends and herself. She has a theory about them, too. From her Hungarian Gypsy ancestors, who wandered through the Carpathian Mountains, come her love of art, and from her German mother she gets her aptitude for sports and a certain practicality.

Many Nationalities.

There are more nationalities mixed in this one small typist than German and Hungarian: there's Polish and Russian besides. She was born in Poland, lived at Lodz and Warsaw. Her dexterity with the Russian, Polish and German languages got her a job in New York several years ago helping would-be Ellis Island interpreters brush up in those tongues.

"But," she says definitely, "in spite of this foreign blood I'm an American. I'm an American of the Americans."

Loves Tennis, Art.

Tennis and art are her two greatest loves. She was pro at two New Jersey clubs for several years before coming down here. She gave it up because of the depression, feeling there were more important things in life than tennis lessons when people were starving.

"You can't play tennis on an empty stomach; I hated to ask anyone to take lessons, realizing how much of a luxury they were during those years."

If she can find the time Miss Wallace is going to start in again as a pro, but says she's having such a good time playing for fun that she sort of hates the idea. Meanwhile, her many other talents flourish and she remains one of the most versatile of stenographers.

Strictly Speaking

How Do You Say It?

1. If your neighbors keep the radio turned on until 4 a. m. are you HAR-assed or ha-RASsed?

2. Is the noon meal—if eaten at a drug store counter—called lunch or luncheon? If it is eaten at the most expensive hotel in the city, what is the same meal called?

3. What is the pronunciation of debut and debutant?

4. If you have a man to drive your automobile, what is he?

5. What is the difference between the pronunciation of fiancee and fiance?

This Way Is Correct.

1. Mildly speaking, one is HAR-assed.

2. Whether it costs 50 cents or $1.50, the noon meal is called lunch. The word luncheon is rarely spoken, but it is used in formal invitations and in stilted books of etiquette.

3. Debut is pronounced day-BU (to rhyme with few). Debutant is day-bu-TANT (to rhyme with aunt). If the girl calls herself a DAY-boo-tant and makes a day-BOO, her entrance into society will probably be followed by a swift exit.

4. The man who drives your automobile is a chauffeur, pronounced show-FUR, not SHOW-fer.

5. There is no difference in pronunciation. Both are fee-ahn-SAY.

THE EARTH WAS HARD, unfertile, completely indifferent to the lure of grass seed, in the 20-by-30 garden above, when Genevieve Hendricks acquired the property eight years ago. Moreover, a dead horse and a stubborn stump were in possession of the soil. But Miss Hendricks, by persistence and intelligence, changed all that.

Two-Year-Old Trouper Revives Bored Audience

LAUGHTER, followed by a "big hand," greeted Peter Hyde, aged almost 2, cuddly infant trouper, when he made his first appearance on the stage.

Peter's appearance was unheralded, his entrance and lines unrehearsed. He just grew tired of waiting in the wings for his mother and daddy, and strolled out on the stage to have a look at the audience. He was the star performer of the evening.

"It happened in Memphis," Herman Hyde and Sally Burrill Hyde, star performers at the Earle Theater this week and fond parents of Peter, explain proudly.

"We were flopping terribly," his mother said. "Nothing we did made that audience respond. Then one night this huge burst of laughter and applause ran through the audience. We smiled to ourselves, thinking we were at last appreciated. Then we looked and there was Peter. He just stood there and looked, solemn and unafraid, and then walked off."

Trouper for a Year.

That was Peter's only public appearance, although he has been a trouper for more than a year.

Washingtonians are especially interested in the career of this child of the stage. For it was on the stage of the Earle Theater two years ago that his father received the telegram announcing "It's a boy." At the announcement, the orchestra struck up "Mighty Like a Rose;" the audience cheered. Peter's birth was celebrated in gala fashion.

Now Peter is the traveling companion of his father and mother. And a better trouper than either of them, they affirm.

Strange Beds.

One bed is the same as another to him. And when one night his nurse missed him on a train, she looked and found that, unable to locate his own berth, he had crawled in with a stranger and gone to sleep.

"He is a born trouper," his mother said. "But we never meant him to be. We saved our money and planned to retire so he would never have to be on the road. But when we lost our money in the crash, we had to take him with us.

"Now we think it is probably best. We keep a nurse for him who keeps him on regular schedule. He plays outdoors all the time, and is brown and healthy. We don't permit him to stay around the theater very much; we don't want him to get spoiled. But he has the confidence and poise that comes from meeting a great many people. And he is learning to be adaptable. He will probably be better off for his experience as a trouper."

Poorhouse Held To Be Passing

Survey Shows Admissions Lower Now Than Since Civil War.

NEW YORK, June 26 (Spl.).—No longer will the specter of the poorhouse hang over the head of improvident American youth. For the poorhouse is passing away in this country, according to a recent social survey. In its stead is arising a new type of hospital intended only for the indigent whose infirmities require institutional care.

A survey of New York City's Home for the Aged and Infirm shows that admissions to this institution are at lower mark now than at any time since the Civil War. And this in the face of population increase and recent economic conditions.

The increase in poorhouse patients has followed closely the periodic money panics and depressions in the United States. Heavy admissions to the poorhouse followed the Civil War and the years of reconstruction. Then there was a drop, then again an increase following the panic of 1873.

The poorhouse was filled after the hard times of '84 and '89 and again following the panics of '93 and '97. The panic of 1907 again taxed the poorhouse facilities and following the lack of employment and high costs of living of 1912 and 1913 the poorhouse had a record number of inmates.

Admissions rose again in 1929 and then came a sharp drop. General economic conditions hastened the development of paternalistic social measures and took part of the load off the poorhouse. Another reason for the decline in poorhouse inmates has been the curb on immigration.

Says They Hurt Themselves As Well as Their Children

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE GIRL of today may be a whiz at bridge, tennis or fancy diving, but when it comes to giving her baby the right prenatal care, she's pretty much of a flop.

After the child is born it usually receives excellent care as a result of modern child training methods. But from the time of conception to delivery, most babies today suffer through their mother's selfishness or ignorance.

The conclusion that modern mothers are not all they should be has been reached by Dr Lauretta Kress, of Takoma Park, after ushering 3,600 babies into the world. For 40 years she has handled obstetrical cases. And during those years she has noticed a gradual lessening in strength of babies at the time of birth.

Harm Themselves, Too.

Expectant mothers who refuse to give up smoking, drinking strenuous sports, or freak dieting cannot hope to have healthy babies, Dr. Kress believes. Not only do these selfish persons harm their unborn children; they make child-bearing harder for themselves.

"A great many women do not take proper care of their babies or themselves during pregnancy simply because they do not know what proper care is," said the 71-year old obstetrician. "They are geared to the speed and action of present-day living and don't realize they should slow down during the prenatal period. And in spite of all the books, articles, and other information available on the subject, a good many prospective mothers know nothing about prenatal care. They seem to think the actual birth is all they need to worry about."

As soon as the babies are born, most mothers make it a point to learn something of scientific infant care and child training. Which is as it should be, thinks Dr. Kress. If they would only show as much interest in their children before they are born, modern women would stand a better chance of having healthy babies.

Work Is Bad.

Just as bad as the woman who refuses to give up cigarettes and cocktails during pregnancy is the one who refuses to give up her job, in the opinion of the kindly, white-haired doctor.

"I've known Government employes who kept on working until a week before their babies were born. That is bad, very bad."

Although her career has been hugely satisfying, Dr. Kress wonders now how she ever pulled through the medical course at the University of Michigan with two small children clining to her skirts and no money. She and her husband studied medicine together, receiving their degrees 40 years ago.

"It would have been hard even if we had had a little money," said Dr. Kress. "But we were desperately poor. We managed to exist by running a rooming house for students who were just as bad off financially as we were."

Following their graduation, the two Drs. Kress with their two little girls, packed up and went to Australia as medical missionaries. But first there was a short stay in England, where one of the children was stricken with heart trouble. She was buried there.

After eight years in Australia, the Kress family returned to the United States. Twenty-seven years ago they came to Washington, where Dr. D. H. Kress helped found the Washington Sanitarium, and where Dr. Lauretta Kress continued her work in obstetrics.

She remembers every one of the 3,600 babies she has brought into the world and a few days ago she sent invitations to them to visit her and her husband on their golden wedding day, July 9.

"Of course some of them won't be able to come to see us, she said. "Many of them still live in Australia. Others have moved to far-off foreign countries. And then some of them have died."

"The oldest person of the 3,600 is a man 40 years old," she explained. "I took care of his mother at his birth just after I began practicing. Then he grew up, married, and had me take care of his wife when she had her babies."

Youngest Yet to Come.

As for the youngest person invited to the big party, he or she isn't even born yet as Dr. Kress has several "cases" on her schedule before July 9.

Although she is in her seventies, the obstetrician has no thought of retiring from active practice.

"No indeed," she declared yesterday. "I'm going to keep right on delivering babies until I'm in a wheel chair. And after I'm in a wheel chair, I'll probably still keep on."

Those who remember the days when Dr. Kress delivered 26 babies while she was on crutches with a broken leg, wouldn't be much surprised if she made good her threat about working in a wheel chair.

Asked if medical science had improved the conditions attending childbirth in the last 40 years, she said, "Oh, yes. Doctors make it as easy as they can for mothers today. But babies still come in the same old way." She chuckled. "I guess they always will."

Trailing Frocks Will Be Worn At Paris Races

French Flair for Dressy Things Exemplified by Organdies, Nets.

PARIS (AP).—Gay, frivolous race-track clothes of organdy, taffeta and net are being run through dressmakers' workrooms here in preparation for the coming "Grande Semaine," which Paris hopes will be the most brilliant in a decade.

Parisians love to "dress up" for the races and, with a three weeks' program scheduled in June and July instead of the usual eight days, costumes to wear at the Prix des Dragge and the Grand Prix are being evolved in more formal designs than ever. Skirts are often ankle or floor length, sleeves are sometimes short and hats which go with the frocks have wide eye-shading brims.

Old-fashioned flowers such as pansies and poppies are used as waistline accents, and fabric gloves and bags add a summary touch to the ensembles which will fill the boxes and parade the flower-bordered paths on gala days.

Worth uses white net to fashion one smart long-sleeved design. It is finely pleated from shoulder to her waist and finished with a waist bouquet of pansies in brown, orange and yellow tones. For the Comtesse Elie de Ganay, who is one of the smartest women in Paris, he has designed a cap-sleeved floor-length frock of black and white checked taffeta to be worn with a little waist-length cape, and for the Comtesse de Talhouet, a gray crepe de chine printed in bright-colored nosegays, also topped by a brief cape of the same fabric.

Lanvin uses plain-colored crepe for the frocks which she designs for Longchamps and Ascot. She makes one of lapis lazuli blue, one of beige and another of black with a beige yoke and sleeves. All are designed with ankle or grass-length skirts and full long bishop sleeves. Many of these frocks designed for race wear also will do duty at garden parties and small informal dinners.

For women who want less formal clothes in which to watch the ponies run, there are dozens of ensembles combining frocks of average length with a three-quarter length coat. Navy blue taffeta, natural colored linen and flowered crepe fashion most of them.

Broad-brimmed straw "merry widow" hats, Chinese coolie hats with wide down-curving brims and very flat crowns, and Japanese jinrickisha men's hats with peaked crowns are favorite chapeaux for the races, since they offer shade from the sun and add to the formality of the costume.

Job Difficulties for Graduates Cited at Career Conference

THE MAJORITY of this year's college graduates must content themselves with inferior and menial positions since American colleges are graduating twice as many students as there are jobs.

Authority for this statement is Dean Zelotes W. Coombs, of Worcester Polytechnic Institute, a speaker at the first choose-a-career conference, being held this week in Newark, N. J.

Unless the problem of the college graduate in uncongenial employment is solved, the United States will be torn with the same revolt and unrest that is gripping Germany, Dean Coombs declared.

Business officials who hire graduates for menial positions, promising great opportunities for future advancement, were severely criticized by Frank S. Freeman, chairman of the Cornell committee on placement, also a speaker at the conference. Employers should be more frank with applicants, Mr. Freeman believes.

Many college-trained persons fail to make business connections because they do not know how to "sell themselves" in their first interview, Prof. Frank D. Carven, of Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, is convinced.

The bureau, to be supported by foundations and by the colleges themselves, would make a survey of the opportunities in industry, a study of the vocational desires of students and would then inform the graduates of the available jobs.

Several speakers urged the choose-a-career conference be made an annual affair and that the data secured at each session be made public to help in the solving of the student-unemployment problem, a problem that Dean Coombs declared to be the most important in the United States today.

Quiet 'Fourth' Possible But Not Probable

By Ruth Anne Davis.

PARENTS who are already making plans for a quiet "Fourth" are optimistically overlooking the fireworks problem. But they may as well resign themselves. It's sure to come, that plaintive, "Mama can I have some sparklers?" And if it's just sparklers, mama is lucky.

For along with a number of other ingenious inventions, there have been numerous innovations in this field. Doubtless the colorful Roman candles and disturbing firecrackers are still first on the list, but there are others sure to intrigue young celebrators.

A downtown store has set aside an aisle table for any number of devices. One called "Vesuvius fountain" is all its name implies. Once lighted it gives rise to a rush of harmless sparks, brilliant graceful—and really amusing. The "flower pot" does the most amazing things. Fiery blossoms come blooming forth. Not booming. It seems that a deal of consideration is being given to parents with weak ears. And also weak purses. For scarcely any of the featured fireworks are over ten cents; most of them start at a nickel and increase in price according to size.

Sparklers which back in the days when they were small sticks with about a minute's burn, have grown to amazing proportions. Some are available which are two and three, even four feet long. They may be bought in silver or gold.

The eeriest of the outfit is the "black python." A perfectly innocent little contrivance which, at the coaxing of a match, does the snakiest things.

As lovely as any of them is the "fire." This is a powder which burns in brilliant red, or green flames, giving a decidedly "Fourth" effect.

Flowery Fragance.

Sun-kissed, or, more properly, sun-burned skin, plus light summer frocks, are certainly no setting for heavy exotic perfumes. The effect of the one is offset by the effect of the other, and the wise woman isn't going to combine the two. Instead she's going to begin her search for a summer perfume with a light, airy, dash.

Of course, there are various kinds. And not one of them may be called the best. But certainly one of them is "the best" for her. During her look around she should try a scent which appeared in the stores a few weeks ago. She might not like it at all. But, if she wants a light, flowery fragance, not too obviously sweet, the chances are she'll find it quite refreshing.

It comes in small bottles suited to one's pocketbook. And—joyful exclamations from week-end visitors—is the ideal solution to the hostess gift question.

Mystery Story.

A young man owns a shop. And in his shop he has a variety of furniture, both new and old, glassware of multiple descriptions, pictures, screens, and a silver tea service. It's the service that puzzles him.

He bought it in Baltimore, brought it to Washington and put it in his window to sell for $50. One day a buyer came along, said he'd take it, but never appeared again. And then a woman from Texas decided she'd like to have it but she wants it sent there for appraisal. The young man feels that since a silver shop on F street, one of the largest in town, has already evaluated it at $150 there's no reason to send it to Texas for another appraisal. So there the matter stands.

Undoutedly the service is worth $150. The coffee urn is worth $50 alone. And there are four other pieces! But still it hasn't sold. And the young man will sell it for $50.

His only comment is—and this with a shake of his head—"And I thought people wanted bargains!"

False Finger Nails.

Everybody can't have pretty finger nails, naturally, that is. But everybody can buy pretty finger nails, a dozen of them for $1. A rather bizarre idea to some people, but widely practiced according to this dealer in false finger nails. He says a lot of the beauty shops buy them for their clients, and a lot of clients come directly to the supply shop and buy them there.

Off they do look odd. But stuck on with glue from a little tube that comes in the package with the nails, they look remarkably natural, long, and well cared for.

These nails are a splendid solution to the typist's problem. She can't allow her nails to grow long because they slow down her work. But she can wear them as long as she likes if she has false ones to fall back on.

Ideal Bridge Prize.

Another store has some worthwhile boxes, too. They are small match boxes covered over with mirrors. Cigarette cases are on sale, too, these likewise covered with mirrors.

An ensemble mirror matchbox and cigarette case makes an extremely attractive bridge prize—at very little cost.

A Syrian Roommate Created Impetus For Local Restaurant Guide Book

By Susan Mills.

HIS INTEREST in foreign foods has inspired Raymond H. Ewell, above, to write a guide book for gourmets.

BECAUSE a Washington youth had a Syrian roommate at college, the world is to have a guide book to Washington restaurants.

It all started with the laundry packages the Syrian youth—one Abdullah Ibrahaim Azar—used to get from home. Tucked into the packages, invariably, were succulent Syrian pastries, cheeses and like delicacies.

"And that's how I became interested in foreign foods," Raymond told a Post reporter, as he flipped through the pages of his scrap book on foods, and told of the guide book he plans to write.

"I have files of recipes at home. These," he indicated the scrap book, "are only a sample. Syrian food is delicious. But real Chinese food is my favorite. It has a characteristic ginger flavor much to my liking. Next best, I like, Armenian cooking: then the French.

"One of my favorite Chinese dishes is an almond and chicken mixture. Only the white meat of chicken is used, flavored with ginger. It is really a glorified chop suey. Bok toy, a Chinese vegetable, makes a wonderful dish. I prophesy that bok toy will become as common as potatoes some day. It is like a starchy celery; the leaves are like sweet chard. It has a fine flavor and combines well with various meats."

A Chemist, Too.

Mr. Ewell brings to his study and analysis of foreign foods a background of study and practice as a chemist. His daytime hours are spent in his office at the Bureau of Standards, but his leisure is spent in browsing about foreign restaurants in the District, where he investigates foods.

"When I came to Washington," he said, "I decided that since I must eat in resturants, I might as well eat a variety of foods. It was the same in New York. I think I found nearly all the foreign restaurants in Manhattan: French, Egytian, Russian, Chinese, Armenian and all the rest.

"Some of the Chinese dishes are amazing. You order, for instance, shrimp, sweet and pungent. Menus often spell it pugent," he grinned. "The dish looks innocuous enough, but it nearly knocks you out."

He turned the pages of a Chinese menu. "I've read so many of these I can almost read the characters. 'Yat' means boiled; 'chow,' fried. You have to understand the transliterations or you won't know what you're getting. Here, for instance, chow yee pen means literally fried fish sliced, or sliced fried fish. Here's something cooked with spongemelon, a melon with a gummy consistency like okra. They go for melons.

The Polite Chinese.

"Many of these Chinese vegetables are imported in cans, square ones made of soft lead composition. Others are grown in Jacksonville, Fla. A place there specializes in Chinese produce and grows all the things for shipment and sale to restaurants all over the country.

"The Chinese are wonderfully polite people. I had a surprise the other night. While I was having dinner the proprietor came over and presented me with a beautiful pair of ivory chopsticks. He said he had noticed that I knew how to use them, and offered the ivory ones as a token of his esteem. They weren't easy to use (too smooth), but I managed pretty well. The food would slip off though. Wooden chopsticks are more effective.

"But food isn't my only hobby. I like mountain climbing. I've figured out the proper foods to take on trips, those that are light in weight and heavy in nourishment. Chemistry helps there, too. Dried beans and peas are good because they supply the protein of fresh meats without having their tendency to spoil. Bacon and other smoked meats are good, of course, but never lettuce or celery—they're 98 per cent water. You'll probably find a mountain spring to supply that.

"Another hobby of mine is languages. My chemical work requires a reading knowledge of four: French, Spanish, Italian and German. But because many foreign menus are printed in the language of the country, I've had to acquire a culinary knowledge of many more. Sometimes I have to order in Russian or Syrian to get what I want."

He looked a little worried. "I'd like to get on with this guide-book business—it would be fun. But I have to write a thesis for a doctor's degree in chemistry. I wish I had more time."

Stuffed Cabbage—Yubruk.

Mr. Ewell has graciously given one of A-cube's contributions. It is a Syrian recipe for stuffed cabbage pasted into the Reader's Digest.

Mix ground lean meat with a small amount of fat from a leg of lamb with an equal amount of uncooked rice. Add pepper and salt, and roll up in boiled cabbage leaves. Place them in a pot and cover with a quart of water to which the juice of two lemons has been added. Cover and cook over a slow fire about an hour and a half. Extra cabbage leaves are sometimes placed in the bottom of the pot. Tomato sauce and butter may be used in place of lemon juice if desired.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

Gerald Gerrish, attorney, has advanced money to Martha Blaisdell on her own securities and then spread rumors he was supporting her. She upbraids him and he visits her apartment, where he dies of a stroke. Herbert Cranston, Martha's fiance, and Dr. Peter Baxter, who also loves her, smuggle the body from the apartment.

CRANSTON hoped that all other fears might have been unnecessary, too. And contemplation of them made him wonder how the facts of Gerrish's suit had become known to the Blade.

He parked his car before his house and let himself in the front door. The old servitor who had waited upon his father greeted him warmly.

"Wish you'd eat dinner at home for a change, Mr. Herbert," he said.

Dr. Baxter Arrived.

Cranston laughed; he had forgotten the difficulties of housekeeping.

"I intend to, if you can whip up something for a guest also."

"Mary and I were having a roast of beef and if that suits you——"

"Perfect," said Cranston. "Eight o'clock."

"I didn't expect you, ma'am."

"Did you have a nice time?" Martha inquired.

The maid blushed. There was a beau somewhere in the offing Martha had long suspected.

"It couldn't have been nicer," said Seena self-consciously. "Cook has come back, too. Would you like a tray in bed?"

"I didn't intend to eat anything, but I suddenly seem hungry. No, I'll have it in the living room. Set something on a card table there."

Neither Seena nor Olga had expected to prepare a supper for their mistress, and a motion-picture theater awaited them. Martha, sensing from Seena's attitude something of this, asked a question and received a reply to the effect that they had hoped to go out again. So she said that she would put away the remains of the meal and ordered them to run along. So it was that she was alone in the apartment when the front door opened.

Visit From Valet.

For a moment she was not alarmed, thinking that perhaps one of the maids had returned or that one of the apartment house employes was making some not too unusual routine inspection. Then, as her visitor closed the door swiftly behind him and she saw his shifty eyes and sallow face, fear came to her.

"What do you want? Who are you?" she demanded.

"I'm Fred Ansted, Mr. Gerrish's valet," he replied.

Key Discovered.

Martha's hand dropped on the telephone. "And why do you come in here? How did you get in?" she asked.

"I used the key that he used," the man replied.

"The key that he used?" she echoed. "I don't understand you. He used no key to this apartment; he had none.

"It was in his pocket when he died," said the man. "I found it when I went through his things, at the undertaker's. I telephoned you this morning and you said he hadn't been here."

"Of course he hadn't. How dare you intimate that he had? Except when he came to call upon me, of course, he was never here."

The man's lips curled.

"Naturally if he was here, he was calling on you. And if he called late at night or early in the morning he'd use his key, wouldn't he?"

"Get out before I call the police," she said.

Visit Was Known.

"Don't be in such a hurry to call them," he advised. "Maybe after you've listened to me, you won't feel so eager to get them in. I know. You've all been smart as can be, but you haven't outsmarted me. My master came here last night, or early this morning."

"I've checked up on him. I've been working like any detective for the last six hours. Want to know what I found out? I'll tell you whether you want to know or not. He took a taxi from the corner of Fifty-third street and Park avenue, half a block from where we live, right down to this address. He paid off the taxi man and entered this building carrying a handbag. And if you don't think I can prove that—well, I can."

Key Was Evidence.

"Perhaps you can. Does that prove he was in this apartment?"

"Are you sure he didnt'?" she inquired.

"He didn't have the key to any other apartment on him," said the valet. "I guess that would convince anybody where he went."

"I'm quite sure I don't care whom it convinces," said Martha. "Perhaps, after all, he was here."

"Beginning to think the truth is better, eh?" he sneered.

"I've listened to so much that I might just as well hear you out before I telephone to have you ejected. Go on. What's in your mind? I suppose it's the same filthy thing that your master tried to put in the minds of other people. But go ahead—out with it."

"I don't know what he tried to put in the minds of other people. I only know that he came down here to spend the rest of the night and that wasn't anything unusual."

"The only thing unusual was that Mr. Gerrish asked me to phone him during the forenoon. He said he didn't want to sleep too late."

Threat Made.

"I not only don't understand you, but I don't think you understand yourself," said Martha. "And now I'll give you two seconds to leave here. You came in with a key not given to you; you're a burglar. I see no reason why, if you annoy me longer, I shouldn't turn you over to the police."

"You've mentioned them before," he jeered. "You'll tell them that I'm a burglar, eh? Well, listen to what I'll tell them. I'll tell them that Mr. Gerrish came to this apartment, that he died here. I don't know whether he was murdered or not. That will be up to the police. But if he wasn't murdered, why was he carried, dead, out of this apartment and over to Dr. Baxter's office? Why does Baxter pretend that he died there?

"Yet Dr. Baxter tries to tell me that he doesn't know how Mr. Gerrish came to his office, whether he rode or walked. Now, where did they bring Mr. Gerrish from? So he was here. What have you got to say to that?"

How to Keep Well

Is Cancer Curable?

The word cancer to most of us carries a horror of a lingering, painful illness and inevitable death.

Secrecy is the greatest enemy to early recognition of the disease. Fear that the doctor will pronounce the growth cancerous prompts many to hide the condition, nursing the hope that the lump will disappear or that the sore will heal. The early signs of cancer must be recognized and must guide an intelligent public to seek competent advice and adopt prompt curative measures.

There is no single cure for cancer in all its forms. No vaccine or serum has been developed that will stop the growth of cancerous tumors and render the patient immune. Early removal of the cancerous tissue or tumor is indicated as promptly as possible after its nature has been recognized.

The exact cause of cancer has not been discovered. We do know, however, that heredity, injuries, and irritation play a positive role in the development of the disease. The tumor that sooner or later characterizes cancer is caused by the rapid increase of certain types of cells.

Persons between the ages of 40 and 50 should be particularly alert to the early recognition of cancer growths. Men at this age are not so susceptible, but during this particular decade a woman undergoes a transition in her physical life that apparently predisposes to cancer. Cancer developing in the later ages in both sexes is not so malignant as that developing earlier in life. In the decade between 25 and 35 the disease is usually of short duration and the death rate is high.

Any sore on any part of the body, particularly the mouth, that fails to heal within a normal period.

Any irritation, soreness, or growth of a mole, whether pigmented or not, or any evidence of bleeding about such parts.

Any lump in the breast, no matter how small, or any discharge from the nipple, particularly if this discharge is bloody.

Any tumor or abnormal growth in any part of the body.

Any discharge of blood from the rectum. This may be due to hemorrhoids or other causes, but investigation should be made.

Injuries to the uterus as a result of childbirth sometimes prove favorite locations for the development of cancer. A careful examination should be made to determine the presence of such injuries, and, if found, prompt repair should be undertaken.

A prominent gynecologist has recently stated that because of better education and understanding on the part of the public 75 per cent of cancers of the cervix that now come to him are sufficiently early to be completely eradicated.

Three Types of Shorts Ready for Sports Wear

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, June 26.—This is a season of shorts for sports. And Helen Jacobs of tennis fame will certainly approve of that. For she was the first of the sporting sorority to wear shorts in public.

Tailored Type.

There are three smart types. First in popularity are the regulation tailored shorts of linen, gabardine, flannel, sateen, gingham or seersucker.

They may be very short if you like, but usually come to about five inches above the knees.

They button on the sides and are either untrimmed or trimmed very simply with contrasting stripes on the side seams or appliqued nautical motifs.

This is the type shown on the figure with the skirt. Many shorts come with skirts. And with tops and jackets as well, to make a complete sports ensemble.

It takes a fair figure to wear these tailored shorts. But those who haven't the figure can still have the shorts . . . a softer, fuller, longer kind. These may use any of the previously mentioned materials and taffeta is another which makes them quite dressy.

Knit Baby Pants.

Notice that they are very brief and are quite high waisted with a cord running through the top to hold them secure.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If June 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 10:30 until midnight.

This June 27 may bring you an agreeable surprise, and money-making possibilities are excellent. You may encounter a very irritating individual, but avoid quarreling with him, as later on he might be in a position to prove helpful. It might be advisable to try to avoid transacting business over the telephone on this date, as personal contract will possibly accomplish a great deal more. Care should be exercised in the extending of new lines of credit. Consideration should be used in the collecting of past due accounts, if the friendship and future business of the customer is desired.

If a woman and June 27 is your natal day, you possess an unusual amount of courage as well as determination. These two qualities will assure you success, whether engaged in social or commercial life. If single, you might find it advisable not to indulge in flirtations, and if married, devote as much time and attention to your hubsand as is possible. You have the gift of being able to use your hands dexterously, so any line of endeavor requiring skilled workmanship offers you unlimited opportunity. In money matters you will be successful, if you exercise patience. Your life will be dominated by love.

The child born on June 27, as it grows up, will display an unusual amount of fearlessness. The child's principal characteristics will be its capability of taking care of itself, and using its own initiativeness.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Believers.

There is a well-known preacher, a learned and thoughtful teacher, who says the earth is flat; the truth he's long expounded, "This planet is not rounded, or I will eat my hat. I've studied long and pondered, through shelves of books I've wandered, met science face to face: the earth is flat as flooring, and man is simply boring who says I'm off my base." His followers believe him, they would not pain or grieve him by arguing the point; what really does it matter if there is nothing flatter? The earth's a good old joint. This attitude is proper when some majestic yawper hands down some fool decree; just let Jim keep explaining, his vocal muscles straining, while drowsy minutes flee. It's vain to contradict him, or argue till you've licked him, he'll just bob up again; with diagrams and paper he'll pull his dreary capers until he bores all men. If some wise guy informs me that arctic weather warms me, I say, "No doubt you're right;" he finds I will not wrangle, engage in wordy tangle, and so goes out of sight. I always am pretending belief supreme, unbending, in what some faker cries; because to stand and chatter o'er things that do not matter is far from being wise.

West Virginia To Map Policy Of Sterilization

Health Council Will Meet With Heads of State Institutions.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 26 (Spl.).—Adoption of a policy for carrying out a law enacted in 1929 permitting the sterilization of hopelessly insane persons is scheduled for a meeting of the West Virginia Public Health Council July 9 at Wheeling, by Dr. A. H. Hoge, of Mercer County, council president. Dr. Hoge has summoned to the meeting the heads of the institutions in the State now caring for such persons.

So far no attempt has been made to follow out the purpose of the law. Attorney General Homer A. Holt recently ruled on the validity of the law, pointing out that it is almost an exact copy of a Virginia law held legal by the United States Supreme Court. Holt said, however, that the law would have to be tested in the State Supreme Court.

Specifying eight State institutions, including the reform school for boys and girls, the law provides that their heads shall present a petition for an order authorizing a surgical operation when convinced it would be for the best interests of the inmates of any institution and of society in the case of any person inflicted with any form of recurrent hereditary insanity, idiocy, imbecility, feeble-mindedness or epilepsy.

This written order goes to the Public Health Council, but notice must be served upon the inmate concerned 30 days before presentation. But even after an order is granted by the council directing a surgical operation, the law provides that the inmate or his guardian shall have the right to appeal to the circuit court within 30 days with a further right of appeal to the State supreme court.

The law specifies the kinds of operations that may be performed.

Members of the West Virginia Public Health Council are A. E. McCue, State health commissioner; Dr. W. C. D. McCuskey, of Ohio County; Dr. W. E. Vest, Cabell County; Dr. Samuel W. Price, Fayette County; Dr. M. T. Morrison, Braxton County; Dr. B. H. Swint, Kanawha County; Dr. W. E. Minghini, Berkeley County; R. E. Tripp, of Marion County, and H. Lamont, of Ohio County.

One of the strangest implements of warfare ever invented was the religious machine gun illustrated above, invented in 1718 by an Englishman. The gun was designed so that it could shoot round bullets or square ones, as conditions of warfare at the moment required. The round bullets were reserved for shooting at Christians, when shooting at Christians was found necessary, while the square bullets were intended exclusively for the non-Christian Turks.

In the patent application drawing submitted by the inventor, James Puckle, of London, the chamber which held square bullets was labeled "for a ship shooting square bullets against Turks," while the round chamber was for "round bullets against Christians." Each chamber carried seven bullets, which could be brought in line with the barrel one after another by rotating the chamber, much the same as a modern revolver fires from a rotating cylinder. The chambers were interchangeable.

The Journal of the Patent Office Society, published in Washington, D. C., which "discovered" the ancient gun patent, makes this comment on it:

"Fellow Christians, as befits their theological affinity, are shot into kingdom come with neatness and consideration, while those beyond grace are to have their passage to eternal damnation accompanied by such lacerations of flesh as they a thousand times merit."

says Mae West

"It seems to me that the occasional smoker is a better judge of a cigarette than the constant smoker. At least, your occasional smoker is apt to be more critical.

"Off the screen I never smoke. On the screen, I smoke when the part demands it. And I want a cigarette that is non-irritating, mild and easy on the throat. After trying many brands I settled upon Old Gold as my 'picture smoke.' It's delightfully smooth—and free of bite—and doesn't give the least discomfort to the throat.

"If I ever decide to take up smoking in earnest, you may be sure Old Gold will be my brand."

(Signed) MAE WEST

Lott, Jones Victorious In Upsets

7 Ring Up Triumphs; Going Becomes Much Tougher Today.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 26 (AP).—The United States had a big day in the all-England tennis championships today as five of her young men and her two leading feminine players, Helen Hull Jacobs and Sarah Palfrey, scored victories.

HELEN JACOBS.

Two casualties were suffered. Richard Norris Williams, the 42-year-old captain of the American Davis Cup team, fell, as expected, before Fred Perry, ace of the English forces, 6—2, 6—2, 6—0, and Josephine Cruickshank withdrew from women's singles because of a sprained shoulder suffered in practice.

Frank Shields, Lester Stoefen and Sidney B. Wood, jr., all scored easy second-round victories, while George M. Lott, jr., and Dave Jones, former Columbia University captain, engineered upsets over favored opponents.

Shields put out the French internationalist, Pierre Landry, 6—4, 6—4, 6—0. Wood tried out his ground strokes on Max Ellmer, of Switzerland, and won, 6—2, 5—7, 6—0, 7—5, while Stoefen blasted the well known English player, John S. Olliff, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2.

Jones provided a real upset by coming from behind to defeat the English Davis Cup player, George Patrick Hughes, 2—6, 6—4, 6—1, 6—4, while Lott put on a great show for the customers on the No. 1 court as he defeated Giorgio de Stefani, Italian star, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

Cheered by Crowd.

Carrying a towel thrust through his belt and hanging down behind like a tail to a kite, Lott tried for everything in sight, doing several tumbles and bounding to a popular victory over the Italian No. 1. When the crowd wasn't laughing at Lott's antics it was cheering him on.

The Jones-Hughes match developed into a comedy of errors, with each player apparently bent on outdoing his adversary. Hughes was the wilder and lost.

Miss Jacobs and Miss Palfrey, the current darling of the galleries because of her courageous stand in the Wightman Cup matches, both had an easy time winning first round encounters. Miss Jacobs put out the unseeded but capable Englishwoman, Mrs. E. C. Peters, 6—1, 6—1, while little Sarah won from Miss R. Smith, also of England, 6—4, 6—1.

Going Gets Tougher.

The going gets much tougher for nearly all the favored players tomorrow. Shields will meet H. C. Fischer, of Switzerland; Stoefen plays Marcel Bernard, of France; Wood goes against H. G. H. Cooper, Lott meets Nigel Sharpe, who gained fame several years ago by putting out Henri Cochet in an early round and Jones plays J. Siba, of Czechoslovakia.

Perry has what looks like the hardest task in meeting Roderick Mensel, of Czechoslovakia, who defeated him in the French championships.

Cards Sign Henicle.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 26 (Spl.). Leigh Henicle, of Roadside, near here, third baseman of the Chambersburg Maroons in the Blue Ridge League, today has affixed his name to a St. Louis Cardinal contract for a tryout in 1935. Charles S. (Pop) Kelchner, Cardinal scout, was here over the week-end and may place him with some "chain" club this season. Henicle is hitting .400.

Dodgers Bow, 5-2; Six in Row for Cubs

Chicago, June 26 (AP).—With Lon Warneke pitching effective ball for his tenth victory of the season, the Chicago Cubs won their sixth straight game today as they defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 2.

Warneke was touched for nine hits, the same number the Cubs got off Ray Benge and Owen Carroll, but he kept them well scattered except in the second and ninth, when the Dodgers scored their runs. The Cubs got away to a two-run lead in the first inning and never were headed. Kiki Cuyler hit a home run in the seventh.

Both Starting Catchers Hurt In Wild Nats-Browns Game

By Frank H. Young.

IT was a bad day for batterymen yesterday as, in addition to eight pitchers getting punished by alien bats, both of the starting catchers were inured. In the first inning Frank Grube, of the Browns, was unable to get his right hand out of the way of a pitch which hit the ground in front of the plate and the fourth finger of his hand was dislocated. And two innings later one of Pitcher Irving Hadley's fast ones hit Sewell in the head and he went down like a log.

Sewell's injury is similar to that which put Cecil Travis out of commission some time ago, only it is on the left side of his head. The ball badly bruised Sewell's ear and knocked him unconscious for several minutes. Fortunately, the X-ray taken at Garfield Hospital, where he was rushed, showed no fracture, but he will be lost to the Nats for at least a week.

Injury Jinx On Trail.

It seems as the injury jinx is camping on Sewell's trail this season, for he was hurt two weeks before the season started when a foul knocked one of his fingers out of kelter and he did not get in a regular game until June 13. He was just beginning to get the feel of the bat and show signs of recovering his batting form when put out of commission yesterday.

Washington's home stand against Western invaders ends at the Stadium this afternoon when Cronin's gang will seek to make it four in a row over the St. Louis Browns. Manager Rogers Hornsby plans to use George Blaeholder, effective against the Nats in the past, on the mound, while Alphonse (Tommy) Thomas will do the native flinging.

Fred Schulte is all right under normal conditions, but the blow he received on the back of his head in last Saturday's game with the Tigers, when he crashed the wall in left-center, causes dizziness whenever he has to make a long run. Fred made two uncharged errors yesterday, presenting Burns with a harmless double in the second nad Pinchhitter Hornsby with another in the sixth. Hornsby's gift blow let two men score and temporarily put the Browns 2 up.

Withdrawn From Game.

Shortly after this muff, Schulte was excused for the day, with Stone moving over to center and Harris assigned to right. Just how long Schulte will be so handicapped by his injured head seems to be anybody's guess.

Hornsby, who has had ambitions of inserting himself to the Browns' line-up in order to add punch to the team, has just about decided to relegate himself to the ranks of the pinch-hitters for the balance of the season. He played right-field in Monday's game but the combination of the sun-baked ground and a sensitive left heel, the result of a broken foot suffered several years ago, forced him to return the assignment to Bruce Campbell yesterday.

"I don't know whether or not I'll try to play regularly again," said Hornsby. "I'll give the youngsters another try and not put myself back in there unless I have to—and I hope that won't be necessary."

Pirates and Phillies Split Double-Header

Pittsburgh, June 26 (AP).—The Pirates and Phillies split even in today's double bill, the Phils taking the first, 5 to 4, and dropping the second, 4 to 1, in a five-inning game stopped by rain.

Bucky Walters' home run in the fourth inning of the first game with two on base put the Phils in the lead and Phil Collins held it throughout.

Gehrig's Homer Helps Yanks Win, 6-2

NEW YORK, June 26 (AP).—Led by Lou Gehrig, who drove in three runs with his twentieth home run of the season and a double, the New York Yankees took their third straight game from the Chicago White Sox to retain the leadership in the American League. The score was 6 to 2.

Gehrig cracked ouut his homer in the third inning with the bases empty after delivering a double in the rst inning to score Jack Saltzgaver with one of the three runs sent across the plate by the Yanks in the initial frame. Lou drove his third run home in the fifth when Babe Ruth scored while the Yankee first baseman was bein gthrown out at first.

MacFayden Hurls Well.

Danny MacFayden flashed the best pitching he has shown this year, letting the Sox down with nine scattered blows. Four of the safe hits came in the second when the Sox counted all of their runs. Ted Lyons went the route for Chicago, but was hit freely, 11 blows ringing off the Yankees' bats.

The victory was costly, however, as Earl Combs, veteran outelder, sprained his left ankle while eluding Joe Chamberlin's Texas leaguer in the second inning. Combs was helped from the efild and his place taken by Myril Hoag, Ruth going into the game in right field. The Yankee outfielder is expected to be out of the line-up several days.

Hudlin Effective, Tribe Nips Red Sox

Boston, June 26 (AP).—Willis Hudlin, Cleveland's great right-hander, pitched the Indians to a 10-to-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox here today and made his first home run of the season. It was his seventh victory of the season, against one defeat.

Ostermueller hurled for the Sox until the ninth, when Walberg was rushed in for his first workout since he hurt a finger several weeks ago. The Indians fell heavily on his delivery, however, and added four more runs to their tally on five hits and an error.

Palumbo Rides Morocen to 5-Length Victory in Charles Town Feature Race

D. C.-Owned Dark Vision Triumphs

Teams With Peggy Can to Bring $69.10 in Daily Double.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 26.—Jockey Sam Palumbo, who looks like a minature fullback, has a habit of showing his best riding form in feature races. Today, he had the mount on Morocen and the son of Morvich and Innocent bobbed down the stretch some five lengths in front of Chatterfol to account for first money in the day's outstanding contest. About two lengths back, came Suspicious, the favorite. Four others accepted the issue but did not figure in the important stretch running.

Morocen, while in a contending position soon after the start, did not appear capable of catching Suspicious. The favorite bounced into the lead in the first few yards and apparently settled down to a front-running effort that smacked of victory. Curling, a 30-1 shot, gave some trouble in the early stages of the 6½-furlong dash. Morocen and Chatterfol were close up.

Suspicious literally ran the ears off Curling but both Morocen and Chatterfol took up the chasing. That effort took some of the spunk out of Suspicious for the favorite was seen to falter rounding the turn. Under Palumbo's urging Morocen gradually cut down the tiring leader to go on and draw away from the determined bid of Chatterfol. Suspicious had his hands full saving the show money from the fast-closing Arras.

A daily double of $69.10 was paid on the combination of Peggy Can, in the first, and Dark Vision, in the third. The last named, owned by F. C. Frisbie, of Washington, was a red hot paddock tip and went to the post a favorite.

The day saw the upset of one of the shortest-priced horses of the meeting, Buck Langhorne, at 20 cents on the dollar, was third in the fourth race behind Ado and Sea Finn.

Something of a record for poor rides was set by Apprentice Feltner on Schley B in the third. This favorite hopped from pocket to pocket and then closed with a futile rush in the stretch.

Stocks Climb 1 8-10 Points as Buying Revives

Favorable Return Actions Spread Cheer; Sales, 616,090 Shares.

New York, June 26 (AP).—The stock market stirred in its summer slumbers today to move moderately higher as favorable dividend actions helped to spread some cheer in Wall street.

Inflationary undercurrents were reflected in the character of stocks favored in a mild buying flurry. Metal, tobacco, sugar and other shares which usually benefit from rising commodity prices were outstanding for strength.

Bulls got a pleasant surprise in the announcement of a $2 dividend on common stock of the Santa Fe Railroad, the first payment in two years. The stock rose nearly 3 points on the news.

Minor Buying Wave.

Traders scanned the list for other dividend prospects with the result that a minor wave of buying came into the market after Santa Fe dividend had been reported early in the afternoon.

Dividend actions and the return of President Roosevelt to Washington diverted attention from the abrupt decline of more than 11 points in steel operations, as estimated by the American Iron and Steel Institute after the close yesterday. Steel shares rallied with the market, U. S. Steel common, Bethlehem, A. M. Buyers and American Rolling Mill finishing with gains of a point or so.

The rise took place on a small expanseion in volume. The day's turnover on the stock exchange was 816,000 shares compared with 490,410 in the preceding session. The Standard Statistics Co. average price for 90 stocks advanced 1.8 points to 79.1.

Tape watchers got a thrill just before the close of the stock market as shares of Homestake Mining, leading domestic producer of gold, crossed 400 on a spurt of 15 points. It was the first time since the 1929 crash that a stock outside of the inactive list has sold above that figure.

List of Gains.

United States Smelting & Refining advanced 3½ points on news that directors had added $2 to previous liberal dividend declarations in recent months. Howe Sound, Alaska Juneau, American Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine and Dome were among metal shares showing gains of 1 to about 2 points at the close.

Other strong spots were Phillip Morris, up 4 points; Reading, up 3¼; American Tobacco B, up 2¾, and American Sugar Refining, up 3 points to a new 1934 peak at 65.

Rail shares joined the rise of Santa Fe. Illinois Central, New York Central and Northern Pacific picked up gains of more than a point. Car loading reports of individual carriers pointed to a further rise in freight movement last week.

Canadian Auto Exports Increase During May

Canadian exports of motor vehicles and parts in May registered a value increase of 10 per cent over April and 66 per cent over May, 1933, according to figures compiled in the Commerce Department's automotive-aeronautics trade division.

Foreign shipments during May, 1934, were valued at $1,862,987, compared with $1,632,613 in April and $1,118,673 in May, 1933. Of these totals, parts accounted for $192,944 in May, 1934, $232,567 in April, 1934, and $71,841 in May, 1933.

Foreign Markets

London, June 26 (A.P.).—Idleness prevailed on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities were firm on expectations of favorable revenue figures. German bonds strengthened on prospects of an agreement coming out of the London conference. Kaffirs and oil shares were dull, but transatlantic issues weakened. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Business on the Bourse was dull with only slight changes in prices, some stocks being comparatively inactive. Rentes were somewhat stronger. The closing was dull.

Berlin—With traders confident that the British-German transfer obstacles would be removed, prices on the Boerse showed a general upward movement on greater buying orders. The closing tone was firmer with quotations at their highest for the day.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Drop of 20 Per Cent in Steel Production Does Not Indicate a General Trade Slump; Business Still Holding Up Well.

By Ralph West Robey.

For some weeks it has been expected that the volume of steel production would take a nose dive around the first of July. At least it has been expected by those willing to face facts. Congenital optimists of course, have refused to believe there would be an appreciable slump, and had insisted that those who were predicting otherwise simply were talking through their hats. This week has shown which of the two groups has been correct. According to the Iron and Steel Institute, with reports from some 98 per cent of the industry, steel production now is at 45 per cent of capacity against 56 per cent last week, a drop of 20 per cent.

Such a decline, while spectacular, should not be the cause for any general pessimism over the outlook. Steel for two or three months has been held at an artificially high level. At first, the buying was unusually heavy because of the announcement of the price rise. The increase was to go in effect on July 1. It was this that dated the period when a sharp decline was to be expected.

Fall Steel Needs the Basis for Much Buying.

In other words, as soon as the advance was announced buyers rushed in to anticipate their needs for the latter part of the year. It is impossible to say just how much of such anticipation of demand there has been but unquestionably it has been substantial. Not only did it carry the volume of production to new high ground for the spring recovery, but it held the rate from slumping for several weeks after it is customary for a decline to begin.

Finally, however, such a decline did start. It continued, as I recall, for two weeks. Then a new factor entered to rescue production again. Or more accurately, an old factor was given a new force. This was the threat of a serious steel strike.

The effect of this threat was to lift the rate of production back close to its earlier nigh. It held at this point for a week or two, and then, with the strike threat more or less definitely over, started on a gradual decline. Two weeks ago it fell from 57.4 to 56.9, last week from 56.9 to 56.1, and this week from 56.1 to 44.7.

Business Indices Will Turn Sharply Downward.

Needless to say such a decline will have a marked effect upon production indices, for all of them give substantial weight to the volume of steel activity. As presented through statistical series, accordingly, we may expect to see a much less favorable picture than recent figures have given. This, however, is a matter of small moment.

The bare fact of the matter is that business has been holding up well. There has been a decline, of course, but it is customary at this time of year to have a gradual easing-off of activity. As yet the decline has not been excessive, and some series are still at their best levels.

It would be a grave error, accordingly, to view the extraordinary drop in steel as indicating that the bottom suddenly has dropped from under business activity. All it means is that one particular industry is offsetting the heavy production of recent months.

Corporation Loans, Federals Hold Steady; Trading, $10,785,000.

New York, June 26 (AP).—High-grade corporation loans and U. S. Government issues maintained a steady to firm tone in today's bond market, but the list as a whole was not energetic and some issues sold lower.

Activity was ahead of the previous day, transfers totaling $10,785,000 par value compared with $7,800,000 on Tuesday, and of this amount the turnover in Government issues was $2,700,000 par value compared with $900,000 the day before.

Fail to Follow.

In contrast to the usual procedure wherein speculative bonds have moved along sympathetically with the stock market either up or down, the majority of these issues failed to follow the share market's lead today and backed and filled in a fractional area with gains and losses about evenly divided at the end.

Some railroad issues and a handful of industrials, however, equaled or came within striking distance of the highs of the year, including obligations of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Bethlehem Steel, Chesapeake Corporation, C. & O. Railroad, Cleveland Union Terminal, Goodyear Tire & Rubber, and Brooklyn Manhahhan Transit.

Most of the various issues of the Santa Fe system were fractionally higher following announcement of a $2 dividend on the common stock. New York Central 5s and New Haven debentures gained around a point.

List of Losers.

Chicago & Northwestern general 5s slipped about 3 points, and Container 5s were down more than 1. Other loans selling lower included issues of Delaware & Hudson, Denver & Rio Grande, International Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, New Orleans Public Service, Northern Pacific, Otis Steel, Pacific G. & E., Paramount Publix, Pressed Steel Car, Pure Oil, Southwestern Telephone, Warren Brothers, and Western Union. American Telephone convertible 4½s and Union Pacific first 4s were slightly lower.

The Government list, including Home Owners Loans, advanced about ⅛ of a point, with the exception of the Fourth 4¼ Libertys, which slid back ⅛. Federal Farm Mortgage 3½s gained ¼.

Italian government 7s were among the stronger foreign isses. German 7s and 5½s were less active and little changed in price, while Prague 7½s dropped more than 2 points. Argentines lost nearly a point.

Curb's Prices Hold Firm In Quiet Sales

Changes Are Narrow as Transfers Rise to 142,000 Shares.

New York, June 26 (AP).—Prices on the curb exchange ended the day with general firmness. Net changes were confined to narrow fractions in most cases, however, and a number of favorites were virtually motionless.

Trading continued slow, although there was a slight pickup in volume from Monday's extreme dullness. Transfers approximated 142,000 shares, compared with 108,000 in the preceding session.

Glen Alden Coal was relatively active, moving up 1¾ points, while Pittsburgh Plate Glass advanced 3 points on small volume. American Gas & Electric and Fisk Rubber gained a point each and Philip Morris, ¾. Gold shares appreciated fractionally.

The oil group showed a mixed trend, with the Standard Companies of Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio, along with Humble and Gulf, scoring small gains. Imperial Oil, International Petroleum and Creole Petroleum were hesitant.

Liquor shares showed little change. Electric Bond & Share, Swift, Technicolor, Waco Aircraft and Greyhound Corporation moved a shade higher. National Bellas Hess and American Superpower eased.

Japan's Chemical Industry.

The Japanese chemical industry has developed to such an extent in the past two years that it has not only attained a dominant position in the home market but it has been able to penetrate into Asiatic markets, which the European chemical cartels have more or less considered to be their exclusive sales territory, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner Donald W. Smith, Tokyo.

Corn Advances As Wheat Sinks In Late Sales

Spread Trading Pulls Market Down; Oats Prices Increase.

Chicago, June 26 (AP).—Corn went higher today and wheat lower, with an unusual amount of so-called "spread" trading — purchases of corn against simultaneuos equal sales of wheat.

A sudden upward shoot of 2 cents a bushel in values signalized early that something akin to speculative fireworks was in progress.

During enlivenment which temporarily spread to all the grain pits, even wheat scored gains of more than a cent, but commission house selling that enlarged in the late dealings found both corn and wheat without sustained support from buyers.

Reactions at the last left wheat weak at about the day's bottom level, ½-1½ under yesterday's finish, corn ½-¾ advanced, oats ½-⅝ up, and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

The hoisting of corn values was attributed in various quarters to signs that the corn market had fallen into an oversold condition.

Aggressive professional traders were quick to take advantgae of this circumstance, and their tactics achieved considerable success as a result partly of dry weather and high temperatures Southwest. In addition, reports were at hand telling of chinch-bug damage appearing in new districts, heretofore untouched, notably around Mount Vernon, Iowa.

Corn traders took notice also of cable dispatches saying a large business in cash corn had been done of late at Liverpool, and that offerings there were limited. Domestic shortage of feed grains and the scantiness of the rural movement of corn were additional stimulating factors. Corn receipts in Chicago today were only 27 cars, against 282 the corresponding day last year.

Dominating the wheat market most of the time was the fact that arrivals of new grain remained heavy, ten leading Southwestern markets receiving 1,700 cars today, equivalent to about 3,500,000 bushels. There were also reports of further rains in western Europe and of showers and cool temperatures in North American spring-wheat territory. Oats followed corn rather than wheat.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to action of corn values and of hogs.

Non-Ferrous Metals Turn Quiet in Week

Tin Prices Fluctuate in Narrow Range; Zinc Is Unchanged.

New York, June 26 (AP).—Non-ferrous metals were generally quiet in the past week with little or no price changes reported. The copper industry continued to center its interest in effecting successful operations under the code and, in the meantime, Blue Eagle copper remained at the 9-cent basis.

Business was of small proportions after the active scramble for metal several weeks ago prior to the half-cent advance. An informal statement credited to the director of the copper code authority that the trend of prices would not be anything but upward attracted interest.

Tin prices fluctuated irregularly over a narrow range but while the market was moderately active on arbitrage buying credited to London account owing to wider differences, mill demand did not develop until late in the week.

Lead held steady in a quiet market, with the exception of a moderate volume of buying for prompt shipment which appeared on a few days. Seasonal declines in demand from battery manufacturers was reported although a fair call from the paint trade was noted.

Zinc also was quiet with prices unchanged. Prospective consuming demand was said to be dependent upon the outlook for steel operations.

Antimony was dull and while a little competition developed among sellers for spot business, forward quotations were maintained in sympathy with Chinese markets.

Slight decreases in steel ingot production during the week reflected a tapering off in activity as the deadline on second-quarter shipments approaches.

Third-quarter operations were said to be dependent upon the amount of stocking done by the consuming trades, and demand from railroads and the building trades. Pig iron shipments against contracts are expected to be large for the month, but new business is light.

Chinese Export Duties Removed.

Effective June 21, the Chinese export duties on a considerable number of products were either removed or mainly reduced, apparently for the purpose of increasing exports of those commodities, according to a radiogram received in the Department of Commerce from Consul General Edwin S. Cunningham, Shanghai. The principal exports from China to the United States are unaffected by these changes.

Adult Education Plan Discussed

Virginia Public Instruction Board Hears Dr. Hall.

Richmond, June 26 (Spl.).—Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, this afternoon presented to the State board of education in session at Brandon, the home of Member Robert W. Daniel, a plan for adult education in Virginia in cooperation with the Federal Government.

Dr. Hall said that he had discussed recently the matter with authorities in Washington and that an accord had been reached on points at issue.

Dr. Hall also outlined to the board the annual report of the State department of education to be filed with the Governor this fall. He did not enter into details, as some material is not in yet. Consideration of applications for teachers' pensions, for literary fund loans and for positions on the list of those eligible for appointment as school superintendents also marked the board's meeting.

Your Child Can Learn to Play
PIANO • VIOLIN • GUITAR

IT WILL COST VERY LITTLE

A $5 enrollment charge and $1 per week thereafter pays for unlimited instruction. We furnish the instrument—violin, guitar or piano, the music and all other incidentals necessary. There is absolutely no other charge. Our studios, a whole floor of private rooms, are open daily from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. and the instructors in attendance. Other hours may be arranged if desired.

NEW METHODS MAKE IT EASY

Many mothers have wanted to give their child a musical education, but have hesitated knowing the average child's dislike of practice. The new type of instruction, used in our studios, by eliminating the drawn out, tedious methods of the old type teacher, makes the study of music so fascinating that children look forward with real eagerness to their next lesson. Progress is much faster, too—average students can play simple tunes in a few short weeks.

Accordion and Wind Instrument Lessons are available by special arrangement

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Jocko Talks About Real Trees.

These cool rainy days reminded Bettie that winter was coming on, and that she was going to need a lot of wood to heat and cook with, so one morning after breakfast she came in where they were all smoking, and told them that they had better get their axes and Hee-Haw and the wagon, and get to work at building up the wood-pile. Jay Bird had told her that he never saw so many acorns and chestnuts and other things for woods-folks to eat, and that meant that there was going to be a long and cold winter.

It had quit raining, and the sun was shining nice and warm, so the Creek Folks didn't mind a little work. Besides, they had been resting ever since they got through fixing the chicken house, potato hill, and other things, and so a little work would just make them feel like eating more of Bettie's good dinner. That's what Dr. Coon said. And then Hee-Haw would have to pull the wagon, and that pleased Blackie, for he had never felt that he was quite even with Hee-Haw for making him pull the wagon for Mr. Man that afternoon.

So Jocko hitched Hee-Haw to the wagon, and they all went out into the forest to get the wood. They cut and hauled wood most of the time for two or three days, and they really enjoyed it, for Bettie was so happy to see that she would have plenty of wood for all the cold weather that she cooked them the best sort of dinners. And she wouldn't let a single one of them help wash dishes or do anything around the house. She and Grandma and the children did everything, and so the men folks seemed to have even a better time than when they were just sitting around. Even Hee-Haw would back right in between the wagon shafts, just like he was glad to pull the wagon, and he brayed early every morning so as to get everybody up and to work.

Well, they hauled wood and wood and wood, till they had a pile most as big as the house, and Bettie said they needn't bring any more. Then they just sat around and smoked and talked again, and while most of the stories they told were true, some of them sounded very much like jokes.

Just listen to Jocko: "Dr. Coon, you thought that last tree we cut today was a mighty big one, because we got enough wood out of it to fill the wagon four or five times, and then left that much more in the woods. Well, out in my country they would call that tree a bush. Some of the trees out there are as big as the bottom of this house, and I know one that has a hole right down at the ground that is big enough for Hee-Haw and his wagon and another one like it to go through at one time. And if you cut it down it would reach from here to Lake Bettie and clear across it. And if it were all cut up and split into wood, it would take Hee-Haw about all the rest of his life to haul it as far as he had been hauling today. Yes, they have sure-enough trees out there."

Billie Possum grinned a little, and then he said: "Well, I don't believe I want to live in any such tree. If I ate dinner down on the ground I would be hungry again before I got to my house in the top, and I am afraid I would be too weak to climb back down. I reckon that house of mine down on the creek is about high enough for me."

"And I don't think Blackie would like to fall out of an eagle's nest in the top of such a tree, either," said Grandma Bear, as she came in to call them to dinner.
